Washington—(AP)—A broad revision of the tangled fabric of world economics, including possible cut revisions and drastic arms reduction but involving no American guarantee of French political security, is conceived by the American government to be the theme of Premier Laval's coming conference with President Hoover.

There is no expectation here that any sort of prior commitment, in the form of a Franco-American consultative pact or otherwise, will be discussed when the two statesmen sit down together at the White House later this week.

The United States does not consider itself in a position to make promises respecting the security of France or any other European nation. It will be a surprise if Mr. Laval actually suggests such a step.
The understanding here is that the sole basis of the Hoover-Laval conversations will be world economic rehabilitation, France and the United States, holding between them most of the world's gold, stand in a position of special responsibility, and are expected to approach their decisions with a full realization of that responsibility.

Revision Talk Certain
It is recognized by many officials in Washington that revision of the war debts must come to the front in any such discussion.

All along, the United States has urged the yardstick of "ability to pay" in dealing with these obligations, and that yardstick again will be used by Mr. Hoover when he talks with Mr. Laval.

Ability to pay war debts is the basis of the Hoover-Laval plan, and the basis on which, in the prosperous post-war years, the United States revised and refunded the war debts owed here by the allies. Ability to pay now in a time of world upset, and prospective ability to pay, will be the basis on which Mr. Hoover lays his views before his French colleague.

All along, too, the United States has felt that an integral factor in world economic distress was the immense sum expended constantly on armaments.

Armaments Question
From this economic point of view, for the moment, the whole armaments problem is under review by the president. France is a large spender in military preparations.
Mr. Hoover will try to make Premier Laval see how directly and powerfully, in the American view, this situation is reflected in the world financial balance.

The question of a political security pact for France is placed in quite another category.

Security pact have indicated French statesmen are tending toward a proposal whereby the United States either would agree to come to France's aid in war or at least consult with her upon the threat of war.
There is no intention here of entertaining such a proposal, if it ever is made.

At the Paris peace conference, President Wilson signed a three-way security pact with France and Great Britain, and it was pigeonholed promptly and with emphasis by the United States.

4 Breweries Are Owned By Druggan

One Operating Despite Government Lien Against It, Court Told

Chicago—(AP)—Four breweries, one operating in spite of a government lien against it, were listed today among the possessions of Terry Druggan, supposedly retired beer baron.

Druggan's alleged ownership of the breweries was disclosed casually in a hearing before Circuit Judge Michael J. Feinberg by Andrew H.
Dressel, who was president of the West Central Savings bank and banker to the gangsters. The institution closed last January and the hearing was to discover assets to aid its depositors.

Thousands of dollars were loaned Druggan, Dressel revealed, including $16,000 on an unsecured note.
Besides this the beer purveyor obtained $12,000 from Dressel personally for which a three-story apartment house was put up as security.

"Druggan has plenty of assets and he'll make good," Dressel told the court when he was questioned about the wisdom of the unsecured loan. "He has the Standard brewery, Stege's brewery, and Gambrinus brewery, and the Mutual brewery; it was 'going full blast' at the time the government has a lien against it for unpaid income taxes," Dressel said.

Dressel said he had known Terry and his brother, Willie Druggan, who also, the hearing showed, borrowed from the West Central bank only on his signature, for years.
Robert P. Neely, acting collector of internal revenue, said liens would be filed immediately against the Standard, Stege and Gambrinus breweries, if the investigation of them, disclosed Druggan owned them.

The hearing on the bank's affairs, which brought out that loans outstanding when the institution closed amounting to $473,000 were valued at less than $10,000 by the receiver's attorney, will continue. Judge Feinberg ordered other officers of the institution questioned.

CHAMBER TO STUDY CITY REVALUATION

Meeting of Board of Directors Called for Friday Afternoon

The board of directors of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce will discuss the revaluation of the city at a special meeting at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon in the chamber offices.

The results of the revaluation have caused so much public comment, especially among businessmen, that the board feels it should discuss a subject of such vital importance to property owners.

The revaluation, in progress during the past year under the direction of T. J. Rhein of the Wisconsin Tax commission, was completed on Oct. 15. The board of review, which went into session on that date, has been kept busy with special hearings on complaints. It is predicted that the board will have to extend its regular two weeks session in order to handle all hearings scheduled.

WEATHER DELAYING SALVAGE ATTEMPTS

Brest, France—(AP)—Efforts of divers of the salvage ship Artiglio II to reach the $5,000,000 gold treasure in the hold of the sunken steamer Egypt, off the Brittany coast, were deferred today because of unfavorable weather. Divers have cut away the main deck of the Egypt and are ready to enter the treasure chamber as soon as the weather permits.

DEDICATE BUILDING ON BELOIT CAMPUS

Beloit—(AP)—Morse-Ingersoll recitation hall, newly completed building on the Beloit college campus, was dedicated yesterday at ceremonies memorializing Charles H. Morse, Sr., and Chalmers Ingersoll, early Beloit residents for whom the building, erected at a cost of $145,000, was named. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse, Jr., were the donors.

STILL FOUND IN BARN ON KENOSHA-CO FARM

Milwaukee—(AP)—A still in a barn on the old Fitzsimmons farm, in Pleasant Prairie township, Kenoshaco, was raided by prohibition agents yesterday. About 1,000 gallons of alcohol, large quantities of mash and an extensive layout of equipment were seized. The agents arrested a farmer named Gerdes.

OFFICERS LOSE TRAIL OF CAR NEAR WEBSTER

Total Loot in Menomonie Bank Holdup Is in Excess of $130,000

Madison—(AP)—Assemblyman J.
D. Millar announced today the state is prepared to order out a company of Wisconsin national guardsmen stationed at Menomonie to join the search for the killers who held up the Kraft State bank there if Sheriff Ike Harmon of Dunn-co asks for help.

Millar came to Madison to confer with Gov. La Follette and said he had been informed by Adjutant General Ralph M. Immel that the Menomonie guardsmen could be ordered out if the sheriff needs them.

Webster, Wis.—(AP)—Sheriff's officers from three upper Wisconsin counties, after searching for 12 hours for robbers who got $130,000 in Kraft State bank robbery at Menomonie, Wis., Tuesday, resulting in death of two persons, abandoned the hunt at 3:30 a. m. today after losing trail of the car about 20 miles northeast of here.

Word to Dunn-co deputies not to come to Webster to take up the hunt has been sent by Sheriff C. S. Sanders, who led a squad of deputies from Burnett-co. Sheriff's officers from Washburn and Barron-coes added in the search for the bandits.

Undersheriff O. E. Broberg today said the robbers were known to be in the vicinity of Webster late Tuesday afternoon and had asked highway directions from a county road crew.

Three empty five-gallon cans were found by the officers, while parts of a bloodstained windshield, believed part of the robbers' car also were found by the deputies. Broberg said near where the gasoline cans were found was evidence several papers had been burned.

According to the road crew workers there were two men in the automobile, which had bullet marks on it. The driver of the car, described as tall, and dark-complexioned, had cuts about the face and was bleeding from the mouth. The description of the second man was not obtained, Broberg said.

According to members of the road crew, a Minnesota license (B361-599) was on the automobile, which is listed as a Lincoln sedan. The two men were on County Trunk Highway No. 28 where the men are believed to have driven, either going towards Superior and Duluth or Minneapolis and St. Paul.

SEARCH IS FRUITLESS

Menomonie, Wis.—(AP)—Officers and citizens today hunted three members of a machine gun gang which looted the Kraft State bank and a fourth robber.

An all night search failed to produce the robbers near Web Lake, 100 miles north of here today, although 52 local possemen went there today to continue the hunt. Officers at Web Lake said they found evidence the men were there late yesterday but had fled.

Sheriff Ike Harmon said indications at Web Lake were that a second robber was injured seriously or had died as a result of the gunfight at Menomonie. Persons who believed they saw the robber car asserted it had only two occupants and that one was bleeding profusely.

James Kraft, 19, presumably was killed by the gunmen in reprisal for the shooting of one of their number,
Frank Smith, captured in a Salt Lake City bank robbery in 1919. Bodies of both were dumped from the car six miles from here.

Sees Bright Side

New York—(AP)—Henry Ford thinks the economic slump "has done less harm to the people of our country than a continuance of our previous false prosperity would have done."

In an interview in today's issue of the American Automobile, Mr. Ford says that "the depression is a wholesome thing, in general."

"The condition will be broken when people cease to believe that something can be obtained for nothing and when people get back their self-dependence; that is, when they cease to lean on the initiative of a few either to provide work or charity."

He said lower wages hurt business, while increased wages increases business.

Optimism Is Growing In U.S. Cities

Washington—(AP)—A thread of optimism ran through reports today by 30 cities to the president's organization on unemployment relief.

A number reported business establishments reopened and employment improved.

Some said additional forces were being added to department stores in anticipation of Christmas trade.

Reopening of business establishments was reported by Rochester, Providence, New Bedford, Lewiston,
Maine; Lynn, Mass., and Atlanta.

Reports from other sections in New England indicated increased activity in many lines. The New England council called this report
"the most encouraging compilation in recent months."

Sentiment in Pittsburgh steel centers was said to have improved on account of an expected increase in orders from the automotive industry and railroads.

Wilmington, Del., was cheered by news that a local machinery firm was to start on a $400,000 order.

A slight improvement in the employment situation was reported in Memphis and surrounding territory.

"There was an optimistic outlook in Chicago wholesale and retail markets during the past week," a report from that city said. "Steel orders and inquiries continued good with merchandising buying maintaining a fair volume. Wholesale firms found business steady, although new orders were for comparatively small quantities of goods."

Houston, Texas, said city and county employees had agreed to donate 1 per cent of their salaries per month for local relief.

Reports from New York city said
the number of applicants for jobs, on the basis of a six-day week, declined 2.33 per cent last week, the number of requests for employees increased 2.94 per cent and the number of placements declined 9.8 per cent.

Buffalo said the Pullman company had announced 500 employees of the Buffalo plant had been called back to work for the fall and winter.

GUARD CORNER BY INSTALLING SIGNAL LIGHTS

Traffic Control System to Be Installed Within Week
at Leppa's Corners

Traffic signals will be installed at the intersection of Highways 28 and 10 at Leppa's Corners within the next week, according to word received this morning by F. R. Appleton from N. F. Hayes, an assistant engineer with the divisional state highway office at Green Bay. Mr.
Hayes said the Wisconsin Highway commission has ordered the new traffic signals and that they will be installed as soon as the equipment arrives.

The equipment is being sent to the county highway department here.
The engineer also said that equipment for traffic signals to be installed at the Waverly beach intersection, where the Lakeland intersects with Highways 10 and 14, is being sent here instead of the Calumet-co highway department at Chilton, as Appleton is closer to the point of installation.

Definite word that traffic lights are to be installed at the intersection of Highways 10 and 28 ends a long fight by county authorities for this type of traffic protection at the corner. Last year both the county highway committee and the county board requested the installation of lights because of the frequent accidents there. There had been many minor accidents and several fatal crashes at the intersection. These occurred despite all precautions taken to protect traffic at the corner.

The road had been widened at that point, additional stop signs had been erected on Highway 28, and the danger signs had been painted on the pavement. At the present time traffic going north and south on Highway 28 must stop at the intersection because Highway 10 is an arterial highway.

In September a crash occurred there in which four persons were killed. This accident resulted in a renewal of the plea to the state highway commission to install traffic signals. In answer to a letter from Oscar J. Schmieg, assemblyman from the first Outagamie-co district, Thomas J. Patterson, chairman of the state commission, assured him that lights would be installed as soon as possible.

MORE TROOPS SENT TO IOWA DISTRICT

1,300 Additional Men to Help Enforce State's Cattle Test Law

Des Moines—(AP)—Twenty-four additional Iowa National guard companies, consisting of 1,300 men, were ordered to mobilize today and proceeded to Burlington to assist in enforcing the bovine tuberculosis law.

Adjutant General W. H. Bailey said the troops would be moved to the newest storm center of the test war as soon as arrangements for special trains could be completed.

Two of the companies ordered to Burlington were additional cavalry forces, ordered to report with horses.

With troops already reported, the total forces that will be mustered at Burlington will be approximately 1,700 men, Bailey said. Nearly as many as were sent to Tipton in the first mobilization of the guard to enforce the law.

HELD FOR STABBING

Rhineland—(AP)—Unable to furnish $1,000 bond, Joseph Miller of Three Lakes was held in jail today pending trial in Onondaga municipal court on charge of stabbing Peter Podkowsinski, also of Three Lakes.

At any rate, the railroad shares fell back precipitantly today, after the full decision had become public knowledge. Losses during the morning amounted to $4 to $5 a share in issues that had been bid up $2 to $3 yesterday. These losses were partly regained, later, however.

Banking and brokerage quarters generally had not paid much attention to the "hot tip" yesterday, for there had been so many rumors running during the past fortnight that a decision was imminent, and mentioning terms, that a tendency had developed to regard the gossip of the forthcoming decision as mere guesswork.

SIMPLE RITES MARK EDISON BURIAL TODAY

Private Services Conducted at New Jersey Home for Great Inventor

West Orange, N. J.—(AP)—In the drawing room of the spacious, Victorian mansion where he had lived for many years, a simple and moving tribute was paid today to one of America's greatest peace time heroes—Thomas Alva Edison.

There assembled his family and his friends to bid him farewell, with the music, the poetry, and the flowers that he loved.

The wife of the president of the United States, whom the inventor counted among his friends, was present, but there was about the funeral little of the stately ceremony one would associate with obsequies of a man of world wide fame.

The service opened with "Little Grey Home in the West" and "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen"—played on the violin by his old friend and business associate, Arthur L. Walsh.

There was more of his favorite music, from Bach and Beethoven, in reading of the 23rd psalm, a tribute from Arthur J. Palmer, one of Edison's old associates in the laboratory and a prayer.

Then his body was borne away to rest under a giant oak tree in Rosen-dale cemetery near that of his assistant, John Ott, who died Monday of grief and shock over the passing of the inventor.

Harry Ford and Harvey Firestone, the two survivors of a famous triumvirate, arrived late yesterday.
Twenty-five thousand persons passed by the bronze casket in the half-light of the laboratory yesterday. Other thousands had preceded them Monday. Mr. Firestone, come with Mr. Ford to say a last "goodbye" to their friend and enemy, was among those who stood for a misty-eyed moment before the bier.

Ford Does Not See Body
Mr. Ford did not enter the room in which the body of the inventor lay. He wanted no sight of death, he said, to cloud the memory of his last sight of his friend—there in the library a few feet away.

The honor guard maintained by Edison employees at the inventor's bier was replaced last night by details from the army, the marine corps, the national guard, and a squad of police.

Three times yesterday by the Rev. Arthur H. Brown of the Methodist church of Orange, at Mrs. Edison's request, One deeply affected by the passing of the inventor was William H.
Meadowcroft, 79, who was personal secretary to Mr. Edison for more than half a century. He broke down as he stood by the body of his long time employer yesterday and had to be helped from the room.

"He was the greatest man of all time," he said.

BROTHER OF WISCONSIN COACH DIES SUDDENLY

Kokomo, Ind.—(AP)—Orville Thisthelwaite, 35, brother of Glenn Thistlethwaite, football coach at the University of Wisconsin, died here suddenly today, apparently the victim of apoplexy.

Authorities later announced the contents of Thistlethwaite's stomach would be sent to Indianapolis for analysis. They did not state the reason for the decision.

Mr. Thistlethwaite moved here two weeks ago from Indianapolis where he operated a drug store. He is survived by his widow, a son, Charles, 9 and a daughter, Mary Ann, six months, old and five brothers.

STOCKS RALLY AFTER RAIL SHARES SLUMP

New York—(AP)—A slump in the railroad shares, in response to the Interstate Commerce commission's freight rate decision, but only fleeting influence on the stock market today.

Prominent rail shares dropped about $2 to $3 a share during the morning, and several leading industrial and utility shares were dragged down $2 to more than $3. Buying of utilities after midday, however, brought the market upward briskly.
Rails regained but a small part of their decline, but losses elsewhere were soon cancelled, and by early afternoon, moderate gains appeared here and there.

INTOXICATED PILOT SOUGHT IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee—(AP)—Attaches at the Milwaukee airport have had their first visit from an apparently intoxicated airplane pilot and in the words of Major Stanley Plasecki, airport director, they "didn't like it."
The visitor, piloting what appeared to be an old army combat plane, tried to see how close he could come to the hangars and parked planes without hitting them. After several such attempts he flew away as deputy sheriffs arrived at the field to arrest him.

BULLETIN

Racine—(AP)—Sixteen federal prohibition agents under direction of Lane Moloney of the Milwaukee office today started a series of raids in North Racine, the territory where agents confiscated 13 huge stills several weeks ago. Two places had been visited and one person arrested at 1:15 p. m.

Woman Still At Large In 2 Slayings

Los Angeles—(AP)—Winifred Ruth Judd, 28, slender blonde wife of a physician and daughter of a minister, remained at large today despite the efforts of thousands of officers seeking her as the perpetrator of the Phoenix trunk murders.

The motive behind the slayings still was almost as much of a mystery as it was Monday night, when the bodies of the victims, Mrs.
Agnes Leland, 32, and Miss Hedvig Samuelson, 24, were taken from trunks which Mrs. Judd had shipped here from Phoenix.

"It must be a case of deranged mind—that's as much as we can say at present," said Detective Inspector D. A. Davidson, in charge of the homicide squad.

Search today was being concentrated in the vicinity of Laguna Beach, artists' colony 60 miles south of here, following a report given by a motorist that a woman hitch-hiker corresponding to Mrs. Judd's description had been given a ride to that point.

"We hardly expect to find Mrs.
Judd alive," declared Inspector Davidson. "It is my opinion she will be found a suicide."

Officers again subjected her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, and her brother, Burton J. McKinnell, to a thorough questioning. "The men had been as material witnesses but were released from custody last night."

In the meantime word was awaited by the coroner for the disposition of the bodies of the victims.

The bodies were found in two trunks and a suitcase at the Southern Pacific railroad station. The

DENIES MEXICAN EMBASSY IS DRY

New Ambassador's Magazine Says He Will Not "Impose Forced Puritanism"

Washington—(AP)—Reports that the Mexican embassy was to come under the pale of prohibition were all wrong.

Assurances that the embassy's guests would find alcoholic beverages still available after the arrival of Ambassador Jose Manuel Pulk Casaurran are given in his own magazine, "Resumen," copies of which have reached Washington.

Much discussion was caused in diplomatic circles when the report reached this capital the new ambassador would be absolutely dry. "Re-sumen," pronounced by La Razon company, of which Ambassador Pulk is president, has this to say:

"Some American newspapers—making it appear as a statement of Dr. Pulk Casaurran—have said the embassy at Mexico in Washington, during his term as ambassador, would be perfectly dry.
That is to say, that the prohibition law would govern, by the desire of Dr. Pulk, in the embassy of Mexico.
"It is not true. To Pulk, personally, there is little or no interest in the question of drinking, but he does not feel it right to impose on any guest of the embassy of Mexico a forced attitude of anti-alcoholic puritanism."

"At least Mexico will not lose any friend, if it is possible or true, which we do not believe, that someone would desert a 'dry' embassy, for the single reason of not finding wine therein."

Surcharges Would Enable

New York—(AP)—Railroad executives were busy studying the proposals of the Interstate Commerce commission today, made in denying the carriers' application for a 15 per cent blanket increase in freight rates.

Official comment was generally withheld, both in railroad and financial quarters, pending more thorough study of the commission's plan of a temporary and conditional increase on certain commodities, giving additional revenue to the extent of about a quarter of that requested.

Nevertheless, the decision was informally described in several quarters as "disappointing," but by no means wholly adverse.

Railroad chiefs were preparing to leave for Atlantic City for the annual meeting of the Association of Railway Executives at which some formal response to the commission's plan may be made. In view of the impending meeting, the railway heads expressed themselves as reluctant to express individual opinions.

Considerable opposition was informally expressed, however, to the plan of the commission for the aid of the weaker roads. This has been a traditional attitude among the stronger lines. They have adopted the attitude that forcing them to help weak lines was merely penalizing good managements.

Warns Against "Cut-Throat Competition, Promiscuous Wage Cuts

ASSURE PROPER RETURNS, DOAK ASKS INDUSTRY

Secretary Opposes Government Interference in Business Affairs

Boston.—(AP)—Secretary of Labor William M. Doak today warned the Associated Industries of Massachusetts against "cut-throat competition and promiscuous wage slashes" which he characterized as both "unsound and unchristian."

The secretary said he believed it hopeless for complete relief to be brought about until business "stops trying to get ahead by selling below production costs."

"Capital labor and management," he said, "are entitled to proper returns for their participation in any productive enterprise. Any system which denies such proper returns to any of the three groups is unsound."

Mr. Doak told the industrialists he did not believe in government interference into the affairs of the business world during troublesome periods.

"If during periods of prosperity the strong hand of government should be withheld from interference with the financial and business world," he said, "it seems to me surely to follow that when financial and business conditions are depressed the hand of government should be restrained from interference."

"I do not believe that it was ever intended that the central government should be used as a charitable institution. I do not believe this any more than I believe that the central government was ever intended to be used as a means for the building of huge fortunes for the limited few at the expense of the many."

Hits Paternalism

"No government of any kind in our republic, local, state or national ever was intended for paternalistic services beyond seeing to it that reasonable laws are enacted and enforced and to insure to the individual life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

"We are passing through a time of unusual difficulties. The economic and social problems facing our country are trying and perplexing to a degree, but even with these conditions besetting us, our country is in better state than any other country of the world."

"In the matter of relief I dare say this is the best time to stick to old methods. I believe that the time-tried plans for relief in times of distress are more effective in easing the condition of the needy and in making more certain their return to the better circumstances than any other plan which have nothing in view but the immediate use of government funds to solve the poverty problem."

"When once the central authority engages in relief work, or dole work if you so wish to call it that instant the expectation comes that the continuance of such relief measures will be certain. With this expectation in mind initiative among the recipients of the relief will be lost. The desire for individual effort is sure to die."

TROOP 2 SCOUTS PLAN FOR 1932 CAMP RALLY

Although the 1932 Camp O' Rai is eight or nine months away, valley council boy scouts of Troop 2 at their weekly meeting in First Methodist Episcopal church parlors Tuesday evening laid plans for their part of the program.

The youngsters will construct bird houses of every description, each scout to erect a different kind. Gus Soli, Outagamie-co agricultural agent, gave a short talk on bird lore.

Plans also were laid for a board of review to be held by the troop committee for various scouts next Tuesday evening, and for a court of honor or ceremony the latter part of next week, according to H. H. Brown, scoutmaster.

High pressure overlies the Mississippi Valley and Ohio Valley this morning, bringing fair weather to all sections east of the Mississippi River and cooler to the lake region. A moderately deep "low" which is centered over Colorado this morning is bringing general showers to the western plains, states and Rocky Mountains. High pressure which is moving in over the far northwest is bringing much cooler to western Canada and the north Pacific coast. Showers are expected in this section late tonight or Thursday, with some clearing.

Principals In Trunk Murder Mystery

Photographs that were found in the trunks, that contained the bodies of two women, that were found by Police in the baggage room of the Southern Pacific station in Los Angeles, Calif., caused the authorities to try and identify the bodies by this means. Police are trying to identify photo on upper left as that of Mrs. Agnes Lerol and the one on upper right as that of Miss Edvige Samuelson two nurses reported as missing in Phoenix, Arizona.

Police are searching for Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, 27, lower right, wife of Dr. William Judd, upper left in lower picture, Los Angeles physician, for questioning in connection with the strange murder of two women whose mutilated bodies were found in two trunks and a suitcase at a Los Angeles railroad station. Burton J. McKinnell, lower left, brother of Mrs. Judd, was held as a material witness after he had told authorities that his sister was involved in the case.

MINUTE OF DARKNESS ASKED TONIGHT AS TRIBUTE TO EDISON

Hoover Suggests That All Lights Be Extinguished in Honor of Inventor

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Americans made Thomas Edison's lamp today a beacon of tribute to his memory.

One minute of darkness at 10 o'clock, eastern standard time, (9 o'clock, Appleton time) tonight—an hour when night will have enfolded all America between the two oceans—was suggested by President Hoover as "a solemn tribute to the memory of Thomas Alva Edison."

"I suggest," the president said, "that all individuals should extinguish their lights for one minute Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, at 10 o'clock, eastern standard time. It is my understanding that the broadcasting companies will undertake a brief program in respect to Mr. Edison's memory at this moment."

Mr. Hoover said the turning off of electrical current at generating plants, as had been suggested, "would constitute a great peril to life throughout the country."

"This demonstration of the dependence of the country upon electrical current for its life and health," the president concluded, "is in itself a monument to Mr. Edison's genius."

Augmenting the presidential suggestion were gubernatorial proclamations, mayoral calls upon the people and announcements by great public utilities of special tributes.

In Ohio, birth state of the inventor, Governor White called upon citizens to pay their respects to Mr. Edison's memory during the hours of his funeral—between 2:30 and 4 o'clock p. m. At Milan, where he was born, all business was to halt for an hour at 3 o'clock, with memorial services in the public schools.

WORKERS OF POWER FIRM PAY SILENT HOMAGE TO EDISON

All employees of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company who could do so without interrupting public service, paused for two minutes at 2 o'clock this afternoon and stood in silence, paying honor to Thomas A. Edison, whose burial took place this afternoon. Only those employees working on buses or in supplying gas or electric service did not participate in the silent period.

At Akron, Ohio, home of his close friend, Harvey S. Firestone, and the city to which Mr. Edison went for his bride, who was Miss Mina Miller, the street lights will be turned off for one minute at 7 o'clock tonight.

EXPECT ACTION ON ORDINANCE FOR THEATRES

Controversial Measure May Be Discussed at Council Meeting

An ordinance that rivals the old junk dealer ordinance for controversial heat probably will occupy the center of the stage at the meeting of the common council tonight. Although the ordinance committee will make no recommendation to the council on the proposed ordinance governing the management of movie projection machines, the subject is expected to bob up at the meeting.

The ordinance, which requires that two operators be employed in each moving picture booth, has been thrashed out at two public hearings and several committee meetings, and has caused much comment among theatre managers, operators and members of the council.

Although there are many important city subjects that are providing much street-corner talk these days—such as assessment, taxes, poor relief measures and unemployment—none of these are scheduled for appearance Wednesday night, though it is expected that most of them will creep into the argument sometime during the evening. The city engineer will present plans for the proposed storm sewer on Mead-st, but it will not be possible to go ahead with the storm sewer project as bids on the Morrison and Durkee-st sewers are not due until Friday.

The fire and water committee may make recommendations concerning fire department equipment and the street and bridge committee may be prepared to advise the council on the logic of erecting a new street department building.

Congressmen Battling Reapportionment Plans

Congressman George J. Schneider, Appleton, representative of the Ninth district, is battling along with other congressmen of the state to keep his district as intact as possible when the legislature, at its approaching special meeting, reapportions the state. One Madison political writer says this:

"Some wonderment is beginning to be expressed in capital circles as to whether the Wisconsin congressmen of the progressive stripe, whom the progressive leadership desires to be in Washington Nov. 15 to map a program for a progressive control in the house of representatives, will all be there."

"Even the progressive threats that the congressmen must accept the congressional apportionment that the progressive leadership proposes to arrange is by no means deterring the Wisconsin congressmen of the progressive stripe from doing all they can to protect their present districts."

from too much mutilation in the new apportionment bill.

"Congressman George J. Schneider, Appleton does not desire that Outagamie-co shall be placed over in the sixth district and the plan of some ambitious lakeshore legislators for a congressional district that shall be composed of the lakeshore counties be adopted."

"Mr. Schneider is not hesitating to inform members of the legislature in his neck of the woods that he thinks it would be poor politics to change the boundaries of the present ninth congressional district materially. He is of the belief that any changes in the congressional map to meet the necessities of the elimination of one Wisconsin district should be made elsewhere in the state. Congressman Gardner Withrow also does not desire that the present seventh district be remodeled in the reapportionment mixup. He does not desire a district that will offer any advantage to State Senator W. J. Rush or some other political leader in a primary contest.

"In their desire to keep the ball on the other fellow's neck, these Wisconsin congressmen who see all sorts of obstacles to their political future through a change in the congressional map will not desire to be far away from Madison when the Wisconsin legislature is considering reapportionment."

"It now looks as if the reapportionment might be before the legislature about Nov. 15. This governor hopes to call the legislature together some time between October 20 and October 25 and to have it away from Madison in a fortnight's period. The outlook is not very encouraging for such a course."

"The reapportionment question will await all other matters before the legislature. The congressmen are beginning to see that Nov. 15 will be about the time when the legislature is likely to be in the throes of the reapportionment fight."

"Even a tocsin sounded from Washington by the progressive leadership will hardly be attractive enough to get any of the Wisconsin congressmen except the Milwaukee members whose districts are not to be changed away from the state until the apportionment bill is settled."

COUNTY'S SHARE OF UTILITY TAX TO BE $37,717

Money Will Be Paid Some time in December, Says Report to Clerk

Outagamie-co's share of the tax assessed by the Wisconsin Tax commission against public utilities, part of whose properties lie in the county, will be $37,717.02 according to a report received by John E. Hantschel, county clerk, from the state commission. Last year the county's share was $36,791.58.

Under the new state law the public utilities are taxed on the average rate of taxation. The commission assesses the taxes in all cases where the property of the utilities extends in more than one county. The amount of tax thus collected is then divided as follows: 65 per cent to the town, city or village in which the property lies; 20 per cent to the county; and 15 per cent to the state. Taxes assessed this year are due on Dec. 1 and the county will receive its share, Mr. Hantschel was informed, sometime in December.

Firms paying taxes this year, and the amounts they paid last year, are: Wisconsin Michigan Power Company, 1931, $29,775.36; 1930, $28,781.53; Green Bay and Mississippi canal company, 1931, $6,391.80, 1930, $6,380.90; Wisconsin Valley Electric company, 1931, $731.94, 1930, $756.51; Kaukauna Municipal Electric and Water department, 1931, $524.46, 1930, $511.24; Wisconsin Public Service company, 1931, $286.71, 1930, $332; New London Municipal Electric and Water department, 1931, $5.51, 1930, none; Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Co., 1931, $1.74, 1930, none.

Expect 50 Valley Council
Scout Leaders to Participate

The program for the fourth annual leadership training course for valley council scout commissioners, field men, troop committeemen, scoutmasters and assistants has been completed, according to Herb Heilig, director of Appleton vocational school, and chairman of the council's leadership training committee. The first meeting will take place Wednesday evening, Nov. 4, at a place to be designated later. Approximately 75 leaders are expected to take the course.

"The Principles of Scoutmastership" will be the theme of the 10 week's course. Among the principal topics to be discussed at various meetings are: "The Nature of the Boy," "A Scout Program Which Meets the Boy's Needs," Educational Objectives, Scouting Objectives, Methods of Education, Scouting Methods of Education, The Project Method and Scouting Projects, Troop Program Building, Yearly Outdoor Program of a Scout Troop, Troop Administration, Ceremonies in the Scout Program, The Boy's Reading Program, Education Character, Character Values of Scouting and How Obtained, The Relation of the Troop to the Parent Institution, The Working Relation Between Troop Committee and the Troop, The Measure of a Good Troop, The Measure of a Good Scoutmaster, Scout Advancement and Specialization, and Scouting Applied to Life.

Two topics are to be discussed each Wednesday evening, Mr. Heilig says. Various scout leaders will be called on to present their views on the subjects, and round table discussions on the topics will follow each meeting.

The chart is comprehensive, covering the mountain uplift of the world, the various stages in the formation of the earth, the history of animals and the development of life upon the earth. According to Dr. Bagg, the chart is to be used as a collateral study in the geology department this year.

Late Fall Months Best For Planting Lilies

No garden is complete without some of the stately lilies. The planting season for lilies winds up the season of garden work. November and December are lily planting months, as the bulbs, owing to the late maturity of native lilies, and late arrival of imported bulbs, are not ready for delivery until other bulbs have been put in the ground. As the bulbs of many of the most desirable are not obtainable until December, the best that can be done is to prepare the beds for them, much heavily to prevent the soil freezing, and await their arrival. When they are delivered, the mulch can be removed and the lilies can be set into the soil to get ready for next season.

The late arrivals include the magnificent gold banded lily of Japan, finest and largest of all the garden lilies. These bulbs can be bought in the spring, as can many of the lilies but are much better planted this fall even if late.

The regal lily is perhaps the finest, all around garden lily, easy to grow, sure to bloom and of surpassing beauty, white with yellow throat and a rosy flush upon the outside of the petals. It is of the same shape and size as the families Easter lily, but perfectly hardy, while the Easter lily will not live in the open garden.

The old tiger lily in its improved form should not be neglected. Although so common that it is not properly appreciated, it should be in every garden. The form tigrinum splendens is particularly fine. Grow it with blue globe thistles for a striking garden group.

The native superbium lily likes a deep heavy soil. In these conditions it will send up six-foot stalks with graceful orange red brown spotted lilies. It will grow in either sun or shade. The umbellatum lilies are as showy as Oriental poppies and come at much the same season. They are beautiful companions for the lavender toned lilies and much used with them. This is a very easily grown lily that is a permanent fixture once planted. Order lily bulbs and get their beds ready now. Some of them can be delivered this month. Others in November and December, but if the ground is spaded and protected from freezes, it will be a simple task to get them planted. Planted this fall the bloom will be of finer quality and the growth stronger than from spring planted bulbs.

17,154,261 Acres Idle Land In State, Forestry Service Man Says

PLANT TREES, PROTECT GAME, KIWANIS TOLD

H. N. Wheeler Stresses Importance of Reforestation, Conservation

Pleading for reforestation and conservation of wild life, H. N. Wheeler, chief lecturer of the United States Forestry service, at a dinner meeting at Hotel Northern Tuesday evening told the Kiwanis club and their guests that there are 17,154,261 acres of idle land in Wisconsin. Members of neighboring clubs attended the meeting.

The speaker painted a ghastly verbal picture of the destruction of human lives, wild life, trees and soil, wrought by forest fires. He illustrated his entire lecture with stereoscopic slides.

He commended the Kiwanis club for its work on reforestation and conservation projects, and sang the praises of the Isaac Walton League, which has been working on similar projects. He also lauded the Boy Scouts of America organization for giving boys the opportunity to get out into the open spaces to enjoy nature.

In defense of U. S. forest rangers, the speaker said that it is unfair for people to say that the rangers are "getting away with the money" and "living an easy life." He said the rangers are rendering a service to the United States that cannot be valued in dollars and cents.

9,538,000 Acres Crops
"Of the 35,363,840 acres in Wisconsin there were in 1924 approximately 9,538,000 acres producing farm crops and 8,671,556 acres used for pasture on farms, leaving 17,154,261 acres neither producing farm crops nor used for pasture on farms," he said.

"There were some 4,431,416 acres of woods used for pasture purposes of the farm pasture land. It is apparent that there is a considerable acreage of Wisconsin which, if not producing timber, is of little economic value. It was presumed in the early days that when a timber crop was harvested the land would be used for agricultural purposes, but we have arrived at the point where more agricultural land is not needed and will not be for a great many years, and much of the formerly timbered acres are not suitable for producing farm crops.

"This does not mean that these lands are not valuable, for they have a real value in the production of timber, and if properly cared for will grow enough wood, lumber and wood pulp to take care of the needs of Wisconsin and give an opportunity to ship a surplus to other states."

As a valuable as these lands are for timber production, the speaker said, they have in some cases a greater worth in the protection of wild life and in furnishing places for the hundreds of thousands of people who come to the state for recreation, to play and enjoy the great outdoors.

Urges Tree Planting
"The whole forestry question for Wisconsin is large and involves not only the 17,000,000 acres of land not used otherwise, but also some of the woodland on the farms. It also concerns the planting of trees in areas which have been burned over and are not restocking. It concerns roadside and farmstead tree planting. The state has a state nursery and trees can be secured for planting on the farms and natural woodland acres at a reasonable figure."

"In the greater part of the state, especially in the north and west, tree planting is unnecessary as fire kept out of the woods. Fire is always horrible in the forest areas of Wisconsin and it annually destroys hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property, principally reproduction, young timber that will cover these acres and finally make them profitable."

"Fire destroys the soil, excepting sand and clay, with the result of drifting sand, as in the desert, or eroding clay soil. Fires are started by settlers clearing land, by campers leaving campfires and by travelers and sportsmen throwing away smoking material which results in the small fire or the terrible conflagration."

"The speaker said that in 1930, one fire burned 120,000 acres of drained peat land, and the land after drainage was not suitable for farming; was ruined for its natural use, that of water conservation and as a home for wild game animals and birds."

"One of the great values of the wooded areas of the state is in protecting the wild things. Deer cannot live and prosper without woods. Many other animals also depend on woodland for their livelihood and protection. Fire destroys the game, kills the fish and other living things in streams by either overheating the stream or because ashes from the fire are washed into the streams by rains. These ashes are alkaline and kill fish."

Mr. Wheeler said it is up to every individual to take precautions not to set fires, and to use his influence to prevent others from doing so. If fires do start, people should put forth every effort to see they are extinguished.

SPEAKER SAYS FARMERS NEED DEFINITE PLAN

Chicago Man Declares Program Should Arrange for Educating Public

BY W. F. WINSEY
Shawano—"A certain famous American has said that the American farmer ought to raise more corn and less hell," said Dr. A. E. Holt, Chicago Theological seminary, in an address at the banquet of the third annual farmers set-together conference in the Community hall here Tuesday evening.

"All the facts seem to indicate that for the future exactly the opposite is true," continued the speaker. "My contention is that the pressing problem before agriculture is first the development of a planned program for agriculture and second such a vigorous education of public opinion that the common consent of the nation will accept this program as a part of a total planned economy for the nation."

Need Education
"If you will take a strip of territory 300 miles wide from the Mississippi to the Atlantic ocean you will include a very large section of the population. You will include most of our major cities such as Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, New York and the major manufacturing cities of the east. This area publishes the major newspapers and journals of public opinion. It loans most of the money, is the heaviest consumer of the farmers' food, and the buyer of raw material. It will in the future be the farmers' tyrant or their opportunity. The stabilization of agriculture is not dependent so much on what the farmer thinks about himself as on his ability to educate this urbanized and industrialized America to think in an intelligent way about American agriculture. There is a law of common consent which in economics is more important than the law of supply and demand. In the educating of public opinion the present is bringing into operation the law of common consent which is necessary to the control of the law of supply and demand. The problem of the farmer is then a problem of educating an urban public to the needs and rights of agriculture in a national economy."

"When you are dealing with the modern city you are dealing with a group of people who are at present very much obsessed with an experience they call 'Urbanization.' I do not believe that the average city man harbors rural antipathies. Some men like Mecken may use nasty words and refer to the farmers as yokel and peasant, some men have forgotten that agriculture exists and are irritated when they are reminded of the fact but the average city man builds an impenetrable wall about himself by attributing to himself urban mindfulness."

"If you ask a modern city man what is the reason he acts the way he does he will tell you that he is bringing up a child in the city. But we are safe in assuming that urbanization represents a cluster of desires and ideas with which any one dealing with the urban mind must reckon. It will be my purpose to disentangle a few of them in an attempt to reveal 'what is on the urbanite's mind.'"

"Urbanization is the way that part of our population who live in cities think and act in their capacity as consumers of the farmers' food. They do not act and think alike. Some are very provincial in their attitudes, some have the minds of statesmen."

"Urbanization is the way that part of our population who live in cities think and act in their capacity as lenders of money. Whether in India or in the United States debt paying was made a condition of good standing in the moral order. Since, however, Great Britain has given up the gold standard it might be a point for the farmers to have a moratorium on the debt paying enthusiasm until we have time to investigate how some people get other people into debt. The sacredness of the debt paying obligation would seem to depend on an equally sacred system of getting people into debt."

"It is to be seen that the American manufacturer who lives in cities has pretty much written the tariff laws of America. Doubtless the farmer in acquiescing in this case finds some solace in the fact that he has helped cities grow and the more people who live in cities the better for himself, but he can be pardoned if he sees something of the human when one of these beneficiaries of the protective tariff warns the farmer not to adopt a political remedy for an economic disease."

Needs Farmer
"Urbanization is the way that part of our population who live in cities act in their capacity as seekers of market for manufactured goods. It may be the inability of the American farmer to buy which will reveal to the city man that the formula for his own prosperity is to keep the farmer able to buy his goods. That prosperity comes when men get rich with each other and not off from each other. It is a good formula that our largest universities who said that America's return to prosperity awaits the return of the farmers' buying power. As someone has said the farmer makes his living off from men."

One hundred ninety-five people, including representatives of most of the large farmers marketing co-ops, natives in the territory from Chicago to Lake Superior and representatives of the college of agriculture and the department of agriculture and markets, attended the banquet. After the banquet each cooperative reported on the progress it had made during the past year.

Earl Cline, president of the Shawano Chamber of Commerce, delivered the address of welcome. The response was made by B. J. Gehrmann, president Wisconsin Council of Agriculture. The community singing was led by M. R. Stanley who also entertained with several vocal solos.

CITY CAN'T HELP BUILD PRIVATE TOLL BRIDGE

Madison—(P)—If the officers of a city issue bonds to aid in the construction of a private toll bridge they are criminally liable as well as civilly liable to the city, James Cullen, Crawford-co district attorney, was informed today in an opinion by Attorney General John W. Reynolds.

The best remedy, where the bonds are not yet issued, is to obtain an injunction restraining their issue, the attorney general said.

An opinion given to Walter A. Craunke, district attorney of Marathon-co by Deputy Attorney General F. M. Wylie, held that a county judge acts in a judicial capacity in passing upon the application of a needy person for hospitalization and cannot be officially advised either by the attorney general or the district attorney. A similar opinion was rendered to Giles V. Megan, district attorney of Oconto-co.

In another ruling Wylie advised District Attorney N. H. Roden, of Ozaukee-co, that a person who resides in one county for 18 years and then moves to another can secure old age pension in neither county he returns to the first county without in three years after moving.

CHINESE IN ATTACK ON JAP GARRISONS

The dispatch added reinforcements were rushing from Mukden to aid the garrisons. Tieling is about 45 miles north of Mukden. A train from Changchun, about the same distance north of Tieling, was halted.

Geneva—(P)—There was a distinct note of pessimism this evening among persons in a position to know the trend of debate regarding Manchuria in the league of nations council, and the host was widely expected that the United States, represented by Prentiss B. Gilbert, was not backing up the league's program of pacification.

Reports of conversations at Washington between Secretary of State Stimson and Katsui Debuchi, the Japanese ambassador, appeared to have aroused fears that the United States was playing a lone hand and short-circuiting the council's efforts to induce withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria.

At the same time Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's representative on the council, remained adamant in his refusal to promise recall of Japanese troops without certain guarantees which it is believed China is unwilling to undertake.

Half an hour later five youths, wearing skintight suits which bones were painted with a phosphorescent material, were thinking it over in the lockup.

Mumm, and for the 50 or more other Appleton actors, dancers and musicians who took part in the first showing of "Happy Days," the benefit production for the band which opened at Lawrence chapel last night. The program will be repeated tonight and Thursday night.

It's hard to imagine that the youngsters next door or the young lady or the chap down the street are as accomplished as members of last night's show proved themselves, for it's always true that the prophet is without honor in his own country and so is the dancer, musician, actor and dramatist.

30 TEACHERS AT 4TH CONFERENCE

A. G. Meating Introduces New System of Marking Students

About 30 rural school teachers attended the fourth of a series of five group demonstration conferences yesterday at Elm Grove Center rural school, town of Ellington. Three of the meetings were held last week and the fifth was being held today at the Clover Blossom rural school, town of Maple Creek. Teachers from towns of Ellington, Dale and Greenville attended the meeting yesterday, while teachers from the towns of Deer Creek, Maple Creek, Liberty and Hortonville attended the meeting yesterday.

At these meetings the teachers discussed uniform methods and goals, and A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, introduced a new goal card on which he has been working, with the assistance of Miss Nellie McDermott and A. L. Collier, supervising teachers, for the last four years. The system of the cards was devised at Columbia university, but the process of establishing goals, etc., was done by Mr. Meating with the assistance of the supervising teachers.

By the use of these cards it is possible at any time for either parents or students to check the progress the pupils are making. A certain number of goals are required of each student in each class during the year and the date that he accomplishes each is marked on his goal card, thus showing when he has completed the work in the class satisfactorily.

CHIEF SCORES CLAUSE IN FIRE FIGHTING PLAN

Doesn't Believe City Asking for Aid Should Pay for Apparatus Damage

Objection to the clause concerning responsibility for damaged equipment in the fire protection alliance among Fox River Valley and Lake Shore cities has been filed by George P. McGillan, chief of the Appleton fire department.

If the section of the resolution which requires that the city calling for aid be responsible for damage to borrowed equipment is omitted, Chief McGillan will present the proposition to the city council for approval.

According to the proposed plan, 13 cities extending from Fond du Lac to Menominee and east to Manitowish, Wisconsin, agree to send fire fighting assistance to other cities if local conditions are such that equipment can be spared. A relay plan provides that if a city sends two pumps to the scene of a fire, a nearby city will send one pump to the community which has thus reduced its own fire-fighting equipment.

Part III Feeling

The part of the agreement to which the local chief objects specifies that the city which calls for aid must agree to pay for any damages to borrowed apparatus which is not insured, although each city must be liable for injury to its own men.

Chief McGillan feels that an agreement such as this would result in ill-feeling between cities, and that it would be much more advisable to let each city stand the responsibility for both its men and its equipment. He approves of the stipulation that the city calling for aid pay for gasoline and oil for machinery, oil, and food and lodging for the fire fighters from the city sending aid.

The cities invited to enter into this mutual fire protection group are Appleton, Green Bay, Kaukauna, Neenah, Menasha, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Manitowish, Two Rivers, Oconto, Marinette and Menominee, Mich. Several years ago Chief McGillan instituted a similar protection group in this section of the valley, but the territory in the one recently proposed has been extended far beyond the limits of the former alliance.

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU

"LIBRA"

If October 22nd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 a. m. to 11:55 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger hours are from noon to 2 p. m., and from 5:30 p. m. to 8:10 p. m.

October 22nd, speaking astrologically, will be the most propitious day of all the week. More by good luck, than by management or foresight, business will prosper. The home will be free from contentions and misunderstandings. Marriages on this date will turn out extraordinarily well. Love affairs will go smoothly ahead.

A child born on this October 22nd will be winsome, kindhearted, and affectionate—but secretive. It will be a loyal friend. Its intelligence will be marked, and its life will be a success, unmarred by jealousy or malice. It will possess a charming personality and always be on the level.

You, if born on October 22nd, have a very versatile nature. You are interested in many things and capable of doing several things well. You do not believe in putting all your eggs in one basket. You have clear judgment and careful discrimination. You take a real joy in life, and are not content to merely exist. You are a fighter, and if things do not come your way, you, by your will power and indefatigable energy, make them do so. Your mind is a keen one and you are a great reader—and a quick one.

In your horoscope, extensive travel is denoted, and it will only be later in life that you will prize the comforts and tranquillity of home life. You are fond of luxury, but can do without it, and never miss it when the occasion arises. Your emotions are very strong, and you give free expression to them, regardless of convention and in spite of appearances.

You are a hard worker, and possess exceptional concentrative powers. You can switch your concentration, however, from one subject to another with great facility. The one weakness in your make-up is your trustfulness. You should learn to love all, whilst trusting a few.

Successful People Born on October 22nd:

INHIBITING AN ADVERSE LEAD

In warfare, no sooner is a new and dangerous weapon devised than the experts in the art of war proceed to develop means of counteracting the new menace. In Contract, because of the requirement that in order to score a game you must bid it, information as to honor or holdings and frequently also to distribution, becomes the common property of all the players at the table. This frequently points out to the defending players the vulnerable spot of the enemy's lines and when the bidding is ended a heavy barrage is laid down there which quite frequently results in defeat for the Declarer. In order to remedy this situation, many expert Contract players nowadays seek to bewilder their opponents by announcing the possession of strength where they are weak. This type of bidding has proved quite effective particularly in Slam contracts.

Recently, in the Masters' Pair contest for the possession of the von Zedtwitz gold cup, Mrs. Emory F. Clement of New York used it effectively and assured the making of a Slam which would unquestionably have been defeated but for that bid.

North and South vulnerable; East and West not vulnerable.

UNUSUALLY GOOD WEATHER IS AID TO BADGER FARMS

Fall Pastures and Late Harvested Crops Have Been Benefitted

Madison—(P)—Unusually favorable weather conditions have brought about an improvement in Wisconsin agriculture since Sept. 1. Walter Ebling, statistician for the U. S. and Wisconsin departments of agriculture, reported today in the October crop report.

Fall pastures and late harvested crops have benefited by the weather, fall feed supplies have improved materially and potatoes, cabbage, sugar beets, buckwheat, cranberries and other similar crops have been aided.

Potato production is now estimated at 23,048,000 bushels as compared to 18,056,000 last year. Dry weather reduced the early cabbage crop while both early and late varieties were hit by worms to bring the estimate of the crop to 106,000 tons, or about half of last year's crop.

Favorable late season weather aided what tobacco remained unharvested before the September rains and the production is now expected to be about 47,000,000 pounds as compared to 53,000,000 pounds last year and a five-year average of 41,849,000 pounds.

The hay crop estimate is 4,554,000 tons of tame hay as compared to 5,713,000 tons last year and a five-year average of 6,098,000 tons. Despite a dry summer alfalfa production is estimated at 1,000,000 tons as compared with a five-year average of 779,000 tons. Much wild hay is being harvested to offset the shortage of tame hay this year.

Corn production is placed at 68,384,000 bushels, which is 14,000,000 bushels less than the five year average. Wisconsin's oats crop is estimated at 72,355,000 bushels as compared to 109,000,000 bushels last year.

Barley production is estimated at 20,272,000 bushels as compared to 26,000,000 bushels a year ago and a five-year average of 21,000,000 bushels. The Wisconsin apple crop is above normal, the crop now being estimated at 1,843,000 bushels, or almost twice the size of last year's crop. About 43,000 barrels of cranberries will be harvested, according to present estimates. Some 40,000 barrels were harvested last year.

A shipment of 4,270 tons of sunflower seed oil from Odessa, Ukraine, has been received at New Orleans. It will be used in making food products and soap.

NEW EGG GRADING LAW INCREASES PRODUCT'S QUALITY

Receivers Must Weigh, Separate Eggs According to Grades

The new state egg grading law, which went into effect Oct. 15 requiring all first receivers of eggs to candle, weigh and separate them, will place a premium on high grade egg production, according to A. A. Brown of the marketing division of the state department of agriculture.

The law is the first of its kind in the union. New Jersey requires egg grading, but only for specific markets.

A previous law in this state required that all eggs be candled and the inedible ones thrown out. The result was sale of eggs by case count, with the price so set as to allow the high grade eggs to offset the poor ones. The price by case count was about halfway between the prices of the best and lowest grades of eggs expected under the new law.

Unfair competition existed under the old law, as many producers picking up their eggs but once a week, received the same price as those collecting twice a day, Brown said. Under the new law, all first receivers will grade their eggs before paying for them, and set the price according to the grade.

Eggs of three grades will be available to consumers, whereas many consumers buying in ungraded lots, received all grades. Little addition in equipment will be required Brown said, explaining that the bigger egg receivers have graded and candled eggs previously.

The law will not be effective where the producer sells directly to the consumer or an out-of-state firm.

Miriam Hopkins Tells How Popularity Can Be Gained

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright 1931, by Cons. Press
Hollywood—(CPA)—Want to be popular? Miriam Hopkins knows how. She knows how in Hollywood, and if you can be popular here you're all set anywhere. Miss Hopkins was the delicious princess in "The Smiling Lieutenant," as well as many another delicious character on the New York stage. She's a blonde, but she says gentlemen really don't prefer you unless you obey about nine rules.

"Forget your appearance," Miss Hopkins said today, apparently oblivious of her own which was very nice indeed although at the moment she was eating celery soup. "Forget your worries and the business of the moment when you're with other people. In short, don't be self-conscious. That's rule one.

"Then, whatever else you forget, don't forget names when you've been introduced to strangers. Don't call Mr. Smith Mr. Jones. Nothing makes him madder.

"Third, no matter how much you're bored, don't show it. That's an awfully hard rule to follow, but one of the best.

"A fourth rule, pretty nearly as difficult, is this: Don't show any personal partiality in public.

"At social gatherings, don't single out an individual for special attention. Such concentration may not bore you—quite the contrary—but it will bore everyone else to death.

"Be as beautiful as possible. Fix yourself up as well as you can, wear your most becoming clothes and then forget your looks. Don't, for example, keep fussing with your hair or peering in the mirror or freshening your makeup.

"Don't be dumb. You needn't scintillate, but at least you can learn to be a clever conversationalist. Just the same, avoid a conversational 'line' as you'd avoid a facial wrinkle.

"Be courteous, too. This item is overlooked by many women who wonder why they aren't popular. Courtesy includes such things as patience on the telephone, the speedy acknowledgment of gifts and invitations and contact with servants.

"Don't out-dress your friends at intimate social functions.

"Don't interrupt acquaintances of either sex when they want to talk about themselves. This is often, but don't interrupt them. And of course the reverse of this rule is: Don't talk too much about yourself.

"But the big rule," Miss Hopkins continued, finishing the soup and the complete guide to popularity at the same time, "is to stay at home when you're tired and haven't any pep. As a matter of fact, you could achieve enormous popularity by following this rule alone."

URGES PSYCHIATRY BE TRIED IN PRISONS

Milwaukee—(P)—The application of psychiatry to the penal system was defended by Miss Edith Foster, secretary of the committee and crime and criminal justice, of the Wisconsin Conference on Social Work, in a radio address here yesterday.

The psychiatrist goes further than deciding as to a criminal's sanity, Miss Foster said. The most important function of the psychiatrist, she said, is to determine "what can be done for" the criminal rather than "what can be done to him."

Although Michigan, California, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York and Massachusetts are more advanced than Wisconsin in the use of psychiatric clinics, this state leads in the methods of "taking expert testimony on issues of insanity and feeble-mindedness," Miss Foster declared.

Miss Foster denied that the psychiatrist would coddle the criminal. In the contrary, she pointed out that the scientist would segregate the chronic social offender indefinitely, allowing probation only to those who demonstrated "constructive possibilities."

THE PRESIDENT AT YORK-TOWN
That Mr. Hoover would compare prevailing conditions with those existing in the colonies 150 years ago when Yorktown was fought and the Revolution concluded, was to be expected.
It was a happy opportunity even though the times be otherwise.
America has been particularly fortunate, indeed, her greatest good luck has seemed to come through the sort of leadership she has had in difficult or distressing times.
Few people can read a faithful portrayal of the seven year Revolutionary conflict without concluding that the leadership of Washington was the quality that made success possible, not mere leadership in the placement and arraying of armies nor the understanding of military tactics and maneuvers but that higher leadership that discloses the resolute patience, the tireless energy, the cool disposition that holds a numerically weak and disunited people together against great odds, intense suffering, starvation, misery, bloodshed and death, and fires them with the fortitude and enthusiasm to carry on to victory and immortality.
To compare prevailing conditions to those bleak and abysmal days is to provide a laugh out of the depression.
About the time that Cornwallis was surrendering, Goethe, "the German Shakespeare," was writing a definition of leadership. These are his words:
"When you stand boldly erect in the chariot, and four fresh horses are tugging frantically at the reins, and you control their energies, whipping the fiery ones in, the unruly ones down, urging and guiding with a turn of the wrist, a flick of the lash, pulling them up and then giving them their heads, till all sixteen hoofs are taking you at a measured pace to where you want to go—that's mastery!"
Whether or not Mr. Hoover presents the sort of leadership so essential for the nation's progress at this time is a question not to be finally answered now. It is one of those things that belongs to history and cannot be decided by success or failure but only in the cool and reasoned processes of time unaffected by interest or prejudice in relation to a score or more of collateral issues.
What the people actually think of his leadership they will answer for themselves a year hence.
But a comparison of today and 1781 is good political generalship. It makes present day complaints appear so pitiful and grotesque.

SHORT CAMPAIGNS
Our national nominations are usually made in June or the early part of July, and the active campaign begins just as soon as leaders think the time is ripe or something may be accomplished by talking to the stump and arousing the electorate.
In most campaigns we have from ten to fifteen weeks of hard, hectic, hoarse-throated campaigning, altogether too much.
It may be advisable to look at the English system to see whether or not there is anything in it which we might adopt to our own improvement.
On the 8th of October the king, following the prevailing custom, signed a proclamation fixing the date for a national election.
Nominations for office were made upon the 16th of October.
The election is to be held upon the 27th of October.
The result will be known by the next day.
The new parliament will convene upon the 10th of November.
It all sounds like a swift procedure to Americans, perhaps too fast, and one more in keeping with a phlegmatic people.
America would look aghast upon an actual change of government in the course of a month but it may come to look with complacency, indeed it might intelligently invite, a campaign that lasted only two weeks.

THE TAX OF THE WIFE
The facts in the appeal of a Wisconsin case to the supreme court of the United States indicate something of the difficulty legislatures face in writing laws in general language, as they must be written.
The Wisconsin income tax law assesses as a unit the family income and makes the husband responsible for its payment, even though part of it be derived from the separate estate of the wife over which she has complete control and which cannot be made available for the husband's purposes.
One Hoeper, a resident of Marathon county, is claiming that this act results in the taking of his property "without due process of law," that it is therefore unconstitutional and that, although the amount involved in his case is trivial, the principle is great and he cannot bend before the injustice.
The legislature had a good purpose in mind in treating family income as a unit, although the federal income tax law treats husband and wife separately if they elect to be so treated. The Wisconsin purpose, plainly enough, was to prevent the state from being subjected to a loss of income resulting from the constant transfers of property that might be expected to occur between husband and wife in order to keep the rate of taxation down, and with the purpose of avoiding the domestic discord occasioned by a constant examination and question of the transfers between husband and wife. Certainly this purpose is a proper one and should receive substantial consideration in the determination of the submitted question.
But if Mr. Hoeper is right, it may be necessary to create a little more red tape, make a little more expense in order to collect the tax, and therefore, in the end, a higher tax. Quite a useless and futile lawsuit.

SELF-DESTRUCTION BY WAR
"In the next war, if that is ever allowed to occur," declares Gen. Smuts of South Africa, "science will, like some angry outraged deity, go far to destroy mankind itself. The next war will be unlike anything which has been called war in the past."
He believes, as do others, that chemical and biological weapons—poison gases and disease germs—will be poured down on the earth on non-combatants and combatants alike. The laboratories of three continents are always busy with deadly researches.
"And in due course some lunatic will press the button and the flower of the human race will be trapped and destroyed."
It would be an ignominious end for a race which has known great civilizations and great ideals. Self-destruction by individual human beings is regarded as evidence of mental disorder or abnormality. Self-destruction on a wholesale scale by means of up-to-date, scientific, efficient war would certainly be evidence that the human race is not so great, spiritually and mentally, as it has believed.

Opinions Of Others
A UNION OF LAWMAKERS
We now have the American Legislators' association, an organization launched to forward "a program for practical improvements in state legislation." It will have its headquarters next to the University of Chicago. Twelve advisory boards—composed of outstanding national authorities in each of the principal fields of legislation—have been formed by the association to cooperate with a similar number of standing committees made up of leading state legislators. The 12 legislative subjects on which the association is focusing much of the best minds of the nation is the interest of better and more coordinated laws are: Taxation, crime, health, labor, courts, administrative efficiency, transportation, legislative efficiency, agriculture, education, social welfare, and mental hygiene.
This new organization begins its service with a subsidiary council composed of one representative and five senators from each state—480 counselors in all. It is "designed to use every means for welding a closer feeling of cooperation between the states, to the end that there may be a general legislative improvement and a reduction in the bulk of the statutes which have already been enacted by each commonwealth."
Lawmaking industry in America has reached an impressive degree when it needs 480 counselors to give effect to its work. The association is essaying an audacious task. All the voters in America have failed to keep their state legislatures in leash. With hardly an exception they have proceeded in the past to do pretty much as they darned pleased, without reference to popular will or interest. If the legislative union can rope and hog these outlaws and bring them into the fold of a national sentiment and interest the nation will bless its effort. But having tried the job itself with only failure for its effort it should not be blamed for being rather skeptical of what the 480 counselors will be able to do.—Akron Beacon Journal.

Doctors in U. S.
There is one doctor to every 800 persons in the United States, the U. S. department of interior found. This is the highest rate of any nation. Sweden, with one doctor for every 2,860 persons, has the lowest rate.
Six engines, each 1,000 horsepower, are embodied in a new giant airplane being built in England. The huge plane will have accommodations for 40 passengers and a crew of seven, and is being constructed almost entirely of stainless steel.
When all the blue laws are repealed, that will be a red-letter day in American history.

Personal Health Talks
By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author
NOW, FOLKS, PLEASE DO NOT PUSH OR SHOVE—HERE IS THE BRADY BABY BOOK
By special permission of the copyright owner I quote two paragraphs from Chapter 18 of Autobiography, published in these columns in 1920. Chapter 18 was about Babies in Books:
My dad has always wanted to write a baby book. He says every doctor who amounts to anything is supposed to get out a baby book sooner or later. Dad has a very fetching title all picked out for his book and he is only waiting now for the right publisher to turn up. The title father intends to use for his book is "What I Don't Know About Babies." I should think that would appeal to any live publisher. But it doesn't. No, they all shake their heads over it and say: "No doubt it would make a monumental work, but we are not in a position to undertake the publication of exceptionally large volumes. But shucks, father does not despair; he is young yet."
Some people imagine it takes a lot of knowledge for a doctor to write a book about babies. On the contrary, it is a mere pastime. You ought to see my father writing books about babies, colds, dandruff, eczema and everything. Why, all he has to do is spread open all the books he has on the subject, take a composite squint at them and dig right in. The publishers insist on having books made that way. The reviewers do, too. I'd rather be than any baby in any of father's books. . . In order to compare at all favorably with the general run of book babies a fellow would have to be so good and sweet he would never keep through fly time.
If every doctor of any note got out his own baby book a decade ago, to-day nearly every baby of importance has a book of his own. Countless health departments, national, state or provincial, municipal, have issued baby books. You can write almost anywhere today and if you enclose a coupon with your name and address on the dotted line you'll probably receive a baby book from the firm. If the care of the baby was a matter of dark mystery in times past, anybody who can read may learn all about it today.
Amid the vast profusion of baby books it seems almost grotesque for Ole Doc Brady to bring his out now, but what am I going to do, I ask you, with the book, now that I have completed ten years of hard labor on it and no one wants to publish it?
Anyway, here it is. The Brady Baby Book. Just a little booklet, in fact, number 7 in the series of Little Lessons in the Ways of Health. Don't ask me for a complete list of these little lessons. I am not distributing them that way. I want you to ask me for what you want and I want you to want it before you ask for it. If you have a baby on your hands perhaps you will want the Brady Baby Book. In that case, write and tell me so, inclose a stamped envelope bearing your address and a negotiable dime—not a check, postal money order or collection of postage stamps.
No pretty pictures in the Brady Baby Book. Just concentrated, scientific house sense about the care of the baby. It contains the special information and advice which the daddling old doctor feels amateur parents most need—and he feels so because of the questions such parents have most frequently submitted to him these past several years. In short Dr. Brady has endeavored to compress into this booklet the gist of the practical instruction or advice that has been printed in this column, in reference to babies, in the course of many years.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
The Seditary Reporter
I'm a reporter on the—and naturally am sitting a great deal of the time. (R. A.)
Answer—So one gathers, reading the papers these days. The reporters, evidently spend most of their time not only sitting, but hitting the pipe. They suffered less from hemorrhoids in the old days when they used their legs rather than their imagination. At least you should roll yourself a few somersaults now and then, out in the hall or somewhere, to get the stagnant blood out of the portal system and back into circulation. That helps to relieve the piles, also to brighten up the paper. Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for instructions for the prevention and relief of hemorrhoids and don't forget to mention that you have the trouble.

How can I plug my ears so I can't hear noises at night? I'm bothered a good deal by the barking of dogs in the night. Have tried cotton, but it is no good. (A. P. A.)

THE woman with the canes said, "Sen, you're wrong to think the carving's fun. In fact, it's just the opposite. The wood is hard, you see. The sharpest tools are none to good to do the carving as we should. Why, all day long my husband's kept as busy as can be."
Then, suddenly, they heard a squeak. "Why, there's a bird and it can speak," said Scouty. "It's a parrot. What a funny bark and head." Upon the woman's arm it stood. At talking it was very good. "Hello, there, boys! Hello, there, boys!" it very proudly said.
"Hello, yourself," one Tynmy cried. "And say, pol, if you want a ride hop on my shoulder. Then I'll run." The bird snapped. "No, siree! The running would be fun, at that, but you might trip and fall down flat. And, if you did, it would be sad. What would be come of me?" "Well, it's be on our merry way," the Travel Man said. "Ere this day is over we will board a boat and see what we can find. The boat will quickly take us to a place that should please all of you. The Panama Canal, lads, is the place I have in mind."
Of course this pleased the Tynmites 'cause they were glad to see new sights. They shortly went aboard the boat and all enjoyed the ride. It took them to Colon where they agreed to spend the lively day. 'Twas by the Panama Canal, on the Atlantic side.
"Now, if you want to get a thrill," the Travel Man said. "There's a hill which we can climb real easily, to get a dandy view." So, up the hill they shortly ran. "Now, look," exclaimed the Travel Man. "That is

A Bystander In Washington
BY HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington—It was like Morris Sheppard of Texas—author of the 18th amendment—to answer the American Legion's demand for a referendum on the liquor question, with the statement that he would push only the harder for stricter enforcement.
For as far as the senator is concerned there's only one side to the question of prohibition.
There is no need trying to persuade him differently. It has been tried before, but he remains unshaken in his convictions. As far as Sheppard is concerned prohibition is the best of possible things. People who have never seen the little Texan who helped write prohibition into the Constitution probably picture him as the rabid, fanatical and severe type of person who ha'tually wears black and a stern expression.
No Black For Him
Nothing could be further wrong. In fact, Sheppard probably dons black but once a year. That is when he puts on formal morning attire on prohibition's birthday and addresses the senate. He makes such a speech annually.
His colleagues listen to him and shake his hand afterward even though some of them might not agree with anything he says.
Usually he wears a light gray or blue gray suit. He is invariably in a good humor. His eyes twinkle when he talks. He always has time to listen to a good story and delights in telling one himself.
He likes to play golf and shoots a very good game. But he doesn't permit that or anything else to interfere with his attendance at sessions of the senate. Being present at quorum calls and voting time in the senate has become a habit with him.
Sheppard holds some kind of a record for attendance in congress. It is a common sight to see him "on the run" from the senate office building to the chamber after a bell summons.
20 Years In Congress
Senator Sheppard's record of service in congress is an imposing one. His friends say that one of his ambitions is to shatter all previous records for continuous service.
Now only 55 years old and apparently going strong in Texas politics, he has a good chance. He has to his credit 28 years of continuous service in congress. Eleven were spent in the house and the other 18 in the senate.
In December he starts on a new term as senator which runs until March of 1937.

HOOVER PLANS TO BE FINISHED IN SIXTY DAYS

Reconstruction Program of U. S. Being Rounded Out at Capital

Copyright, 1931, by Post Pub. Co.
Washington (CFA)—A survey indicates that within the next sixty days, the reconstruction program of the government may be expected to be fully established. It is a plan of an upbuilding of confidence through a series of definite steps looking not merely to the financing of the debts of the depression through credits but the stimulation of basic industries. The government's plans include the following:

First, the National Credit corporation with authority to issue a billion of credits already announced.

Second, a real estate mortgage pool to aid in financing of home ownership and the improvement of the real estate security situation through a system of redisclosure.

Third, a program of financing for the railroads so as to provide them with credit for refunding and other purposes during 1932. This and the real estate pool may be combined in a single credit corporation to be set up by congress and financed through the sale of the bonds of a government corporation somewhat on the order of the federal land bank system.

Fourth, an agreement between the Bank of France and the federal reserve system fostered by President Hoover and Premier Laval to bring about orderly distribution of gold and the maintenance of the gold standard.

Fifth, a proclaimed understanding between France and the United States which will assure the world, and particularly Europe, that the United States will consult with other powers in the event of the Kellogg-Brand pact being violated and will agree not to aid the aggressor nation.

Sixth, a revision of the anti-trust laws so that industries growing out of natural resources may be permitted to curtail production to avoid wasteful overproduction. Leaders in congress are expected to sponsor this change as an emergency measure.

Seventh, legislation to permit the completion of the survey to use a revolving fund of $150,000,000 in arranging to pay depositors of closed banks immediately as much of their deposits as may be justified by an examination of sound assets, thus reducing the hardships to business and individuals in areas affected.

Eighth, coordination of state and local agencies engaged in raising funds to care for unemployed and others in distress. This already is in operation through the president's committee headed by Walter S. Gifford, but is an essential part of the whole program.

Up to Congress
Much depends of course in the foregoing steps on what congress will do, but the intention is for the president to recommend to congress in December as much of his reconstruction plan as requires legislation immediately and ask both houses to act within two weeks after the session has begun so that action may be promptly assured.

In normal times a virtual tie in the house of representatives might delay organization but with the pressure of public opinion against unnecessary delays in a national emergency it is likely that the very fact that an emergency relief program must be passed before the holiday recess will bring about a truce between the political parties at least for organization purposes.

The senate also is likely to have difficulties in organization unless the two parties work together. During the last few months the president has summoned the Democratic and Republican leaders to the White House so as to get bi-partisan support for the reconstruction and his financial relief measures. Similar steps may be taken before the December session begins so that the American people may be assured by Christmas time that their government has done everything possible to expedite a return to economic equilibrium.

OFFER CLASSES IN SPEED STENOGRAPHY

Speed without accuracy, or accuracy without speed are not tolerated in present day shorthand and to help the student overcome this, the Appleton vocational school is setting up a special evening class for this purpose, according to Bertha M. Barry, head of the commercial department. There will be a review in drills on shorthand characters which give individuals special difficulty. The class is open to students of Gregg, Caton, Farnham and other shorthand methods also.

The instructor who will be employed has had a number of years' teaching experience, and has been trained to teach speed and accuracy. The speed group will meet on Tuesday and Thursday nights for eight weeks. Sixteen lessons are being offered during this period.

OSHKOSH GOVERNMENT COST WAS $1,309,601

Madison (AP)—Operation and maintenance of the general departments of the city of Oshkosh in 1930 cost $1,309,601, or $22.50 per capita, according to figures received here today from the census bureau. In 1929 the per capita for operation and maintenance was $22.99. The total payments in 1930, for operation and maintenance of general departments and public service enterprises, for interests and outlays were $1,335,328. Total revenue receipts were $1,979,206 or $49.11 per capita. Property taxes represented 64 per cent of the total revenue for 1930. The total net indebtedness on Dec. 31, 1930 was $1,254,000, or $32.11 per capita. The assessed valuation of property in Oshkosh subject to ad valorem taxes for city corporation was $65,019,422.

URGE EXAMINATION OF FACTORS WHICH MAKE BONDS LEAD

Expert Explains Law Governing Securities in New York

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
(Copyright, 1931, by Cons. Press)

New York—Starting on the assumption that after a depression bonds are the securities which recover first, the sustained advance in stocks coming later, and admitting that among bonds it is the highest grade of issues which are first to respond to restored confidence, it will be helpful to the student to examine the various factors which go to making a bond investment one of the first rank.

For this purpose we will take the requirements of the New York State law as they apply to purchases of public utility obligations by savings banks. Railroad bonds which meet certain rigid tests are also legal in New York but in the present market railroad issues are not fairly representative of the points that ought to be made in an investment analysis of this kind. It will be much simpler to confine the examination to the utilities.

In the first place then, the law admits bonds only of gas, electric, and telephone companies. Tractors are excluded for obvious reasons. It is the essential service that the artificial gas, electric, and telephone corporations give and the relatively stable earnings they report which make their securities suitable for savings bank investments. It has been only in comparatively recent years that public utility bonds were made legal in New York State.

Prior to that time it was only government and certain municipal obligations and railroad bonds besides real estate mortgages which were admitted.

As a matter of fact the utilities now create security the same do the railroad issues which brings us to the point that ought to be made at the start of the investigation that here is nothing static about high grade investments any more than there is about those in the speculative class. There is no rule of thumb which can be applied indiscriminately to bonds.

Suffice it to say that at present and for the future as far as anyone can now predict the utilities are in a preferred group. There may come a time when securities representative of other activities will qualify for savings bank investments but what they will be is merely a matter of conjecture.

IRISH GUARDS TAUGHT GAELIC

ROASTING PROCESS HAS ACCURACY OF ANCIENT TIMEPIECE

Hour-glass and Hills Bros. Method of Roasting Coffee Operate a Little at a Time

It is fascinating to watch an hour-glass flowing evenly, continuously, a little at a time. But the flavor of coffee that's roasted continuously, a little at a time, is even more fascinating!

Controlled Roasting—Hills Bros. patented process—is the only such roasting method. As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow... a little at a time... so the marvelous flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by this patented process that roasts evenly, continuously... a little at a time.

There is a vast difference between Controlled Roasting and ordinary bulk-roasting methods. There is a vast difference in results too! Controlled Roasting flawlessly completes the work that Nature began in the coffee-berry. It develops the flavor perfectly! You have never tasted the like, if you have never tasted Hills Bros. Coffee.

Remember also that this coffee never varies in flavor. And it is always fresh! Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is removed and kept out of Hills Bros. vacuum cans. Ordinary "air-tight" cans won't keep coffee fresh. Order Hills Bros. Coffee today. Ask for it by name, and look for the Arab trademark on the can.

Hills Bros. Coffee, Inc., Chicago, Illinois.

Mather Death Takes Last Of Great Lakes Pioneers

Cleveland (AP)—Another chapter of industrial empire, which made fascinating history of the nineties, has been closed. Its end was written Sunday with the death of Samuel Mather, last of the pioneering figures of Great Lakes shipping and manufacturing, and one of the great influences in the iron and steel industry for a half century.

His life paralleled the development of the Pittsburgh steel area and the Mahoning valley—the Ruhr of America—and his name became to the Great Lakes region what Edward Harriman's became to the east and the railroad world, and James J. Hill's to the northwest.

As a founder of Pickands, Mather and Co., he was instrumental in bringing to fulfillment the joining of the northwest's rich ore deposits and the Bessemer's of the lower lakes regions.

At the start of the twentieth century, when American capital reached out into the early merger period and the foundations of the vast corporations of today were laid, Mather's executive genius and wide knowledge of iron and steel was widely called upon.

When the United States Steel corporation was created in 1901, it was from the beginning endowed with iron ore surpluses and all the organized machinery of transportation and conveyance necessary.

Yet Mather, with little actual monetary interest, was elected to its board, a post he held until his death.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube company is the outstanding example of his success. When the Pittsburgh steel area spread to the Mahoning valley through Youngstown to Cleveland, capital was needed to round out this new area of enterprise.

Mather supplied the capital that brought about the merger of the Sheet and Tube-Steel, Steel and Tubes and Brler Hill into the Youngstown Sheet and Tube. Much of his executive ability went into its continuance.

He swung his influence in favor of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, then Vandebilt-owned, decided that Buffalo was entering the destinies of steel, Mather joined eastern capital to create Lackawanna Steel, later to form a major link of Bethlehem.

He operated the Interlake Steamship company, the second largest fleet of ore and coal carriers on the Great Lakes, and later assisted in developing Interlake Iron, a merger of furnaces and cast metal producers.

During his half century of business connections, he lent assistance to many independent steel concerns some strong, some weak and embryonic, who came for counsel or capital. Perhaps his fortune, which is estimated at more than $100,000,000 at death, does not equal many of the fortunes reared upon the stakes of industrial chance, yet his interests were the great leaving influences upon a new century of industry and gigantic growth.

With Andrew Carnegie, Marcus A. Hanna and Henry Clay Frick, he was one of those who wrought at the mainstays of the nation's industries.

COUNTY BOARD MEET SET FOR NOVEMBER 10

Preparations are being made by John E. Hantschel, county clerk, for the annual meeting of the Outagamie county board for the week beginning Nov. 10. It is at this meeting that the board elects various county officers, committees are named, and the tax budget for 1932 is set.

This year the second day of the meeting will fall on Nov. 11, Armistice day, which has been declared a legal holiday. Thus the board cannot transact any legal business on that day. It may adjourn from

Tuesday until Thursday or it may meet Wednesday and confine its activities entirely to discussion of problems before it.

"Two Years Since I Had a Headache"

Says Florence Sherman of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Calif. — "For years I suffered with splitting headaches," says Miss Florence Sherman of this city. "I tried everything for relief, but nothing did more than temporary good. Finally I went to my doctor. He attributed the cause to constipation, and prescribed Pluto Water—a small dose each morning, diluted in hot water. That was two years ago. Since then, thanks to Pluto, I have never had a headache from this cause."

Pluto Water is more than a relief for constipation—although it is in that connection that it is best known. Pluto Water will relieve the most stubborn case in from thirty minutes to two hours; but, taken regularly each morning (a small quantity in hot or cold water) it will keep the system regular, help ward off many serious complaints. Try it today. Pluto Water is bottled at French Lick Springs, Ind., and is sold at drug stores and fountains everywhere.

Find Reason If Child Is Over Eating

BY ANGELO PATRI
We are learning more and more about how children grow. We do not make so many mistakes as we used to do. There is still plenty of room for improvement, plenty of need for the distribution of knowledge regarding children, but we can be thankful and hopeful, too.

There is a fat little boy who lives on our street. He is always eating. "Why don't you make him stop eating so much? Why don't you take that cracker away from him? He's too fat now," said his big sister. "It won't do any good. He is hungry all the time. The doctor tells me that he needs treatment and medicine and then he will not want to eat all the time. By and by his digestion will work all right and he won't feel hungry all the time. We have to be patient a little."

I remember the time when that mother would have snatched the cracker out of the pudgy hand, smacked that youngster and scolded him for being such a glutton. That is what she did with his older brother until we rescued him. So times are better for the mothers and the children. But as I hinted, not perfect enough to warrant our all taking a day off. Not yet.

There are still people who think that a scolding and a smack will cure almost everything, even overweight. The overweight children are suffering most of them at least from malnutrition. What they need is a careful examination and a diet fit for their needs. No child is hungry all day long. If he eats like that there is something the matter and the sooner he is taken to the doctor the better.

There are children who will eat too much at one time if they are not watched. There are those who will eat all they can hold of one item of their diet. A careful watch must be kept on them to see that they get enough, and a variety of food. After that they can go ahead and enjoy themselves.

The adolescent boy ought to have a good appetite. It is nothing unusual for a healthy boy to eat more than his father, or his mother. He ought to be protected from the gibes of his dieting sister. He is a sensitive soul even if he does eat like a horse and talk like one. It is entirely out of order for a sister to say, "Goodness. Where do you put it? That's the fourth slice of bread, and goodness knows how many potatoes, to say nothing of the vegetables you have eaten. You're a bottomless pit."

Such remarks do harm. Personalities ought to be barred in the family anyway. Especially at the table, good manners are imperative. They save friction and prevent a lot of unhappiness that is caused by hoodless words and actions. Growing children ought to have good appetites and they ought to be allowed to enjoy them to the full.

Few children can rightfully be called gluttons. The few that eat to excess need the care of the expert physician at once. A little attention to the menu will direct the others to discreet ways.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Proper Furnace Firing Keeps Coal Bills Down

Washington, D. C. — Building a furnace fire properly and making it deliver heat at highest efficiency are accomplishments few home owners have been able to achieve. It is imperative that they should, because on the correct building of fires depends the size of their coal bills.

Government officials here state that 25 per cent of a home owner's fuel bills can be saved "by burning coal, instead of cooking it." To burn coal several steps are necessary.

First, the right size fuel should be selected for a furnace. The size of coal is regulated by the draft—a high draft uses smaller fuel and a low draft uses larger. The size of the firepot also regulates the size of the coal.

Assuming that the furnace has been built and the basement made airtight, the first fire is made in the following manner:

First spread a layer of excelsior or paper on the grate. Next a layer of light kindling and then one of heavier wood. On this spread a thin layer of fine coal. Ignite the paper, open the check and wait for the layer of kindling and coal to ignite. When this happens, throw in more coal and continue until the firepot is nearly level full. Then reduce the draft and open the check.

Have Space Open
In adding coal to a fire, here is the recommended practice of the U. S. Bureau of Mines:

"Too many persons make the mistake of covering the entire firebed each time they add coal. When this happens, most of the gases are cooked out and escape up the chimney without being burned."

The best method is to apply a layer of fuel on one side of the furnace and then, when this has burned down, throw the next heap on the opposite side. This alternating method always exposes a bed of live coals to ignite the gases.

"A big fire burning slowly is cheaper in the long run than a little fire burning fast. Fast burning means incomplete combustion, and hence more waste in the ashes."

Keeping a furnace clean saves coal consumption. Keep out the clinkers and ashes. See to it that at all times live coals, not dust or ashes or soot or unburned fuel, are in contact with the heating surfaces.

Long and Short

To make a long story short, this picture shows W. C. Barnett, mid-get Roxboro, N. C., cigar salesman, as he clambered atop a table to kiss his bride, the former Tessie Burdette of Baltimore, Md. He's three feet seven inches tall and weighs 69 pounds. She's five feet three inches tall and weighs 130 pounds. It was a case of love at first sight.

They are Mrs. Alex Pierre, Mrs. Matt Bauer, Mrs. John E. Hughes, Mrs. Lloyd Fumal, and Mrs. John Stark, the latter having been charter director.

A number of new members will be initiated at this time, and the membership drive will be officially closed. Plans will be made for an open card party and fair to be held Nov. 12.

Past presidents held a meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John E. Hughes, W. Seventh-st. Five members and three guests were present. Court whist was played after the business meeting. The next meeting will be Nov. 17 at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Fumal, 550 N. Clark-st.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Marjorie Goldstein, 318 N. Oneida-st.

ORGANIZE PEOPLE BY MILLIONS FOR U. S. CELEBRATION

600,000 Committees Work on Plans for Washington Bicentennial

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington — Six hundred thousand (600,000) George Washington Bicentennial committees, devoted to honoring Washington in as many ways as they can think of in every town and cross-roads during the nine-months celebration next year, is one aim of the Bicentennial Commission here.

The commission is a barrage of questionnaires, pep letters, George Washington literature and celebration programs at 49,000 postmasters, 110,000 city officials, 22,000 churches, 150,000 fraternal and patriotic societies, 256,000 school buildings, 7000 farm groups and so on. It is trying to get them all card-indexed and to see that they get organized. More than 6000 city and town committees already are formed, plus the committees for all states and territorial possessions. Each municipal or village committee are the important ones and they coordinate the work of the minor committees. Over 6000 letters a day now leave the national Bicentennial offices here, but that's only a starter and it doesn't count a great tonnage of literature, posters and other bally-hoo.

Send Questionnaires
Congressman Sol Bloom, the director, began by sending a long questionnaire to more than 49,000 federal postmasters. He demanded the population, names of the mayor and most of the prominent citizens, names and presidents of all amusement parks, civic and patriotic organizations, social clubs, names of all churches and their pastors, all school boards and schools, young people's groups, bar associations, men's fraternal societies, women's groups and automobile associations. The Bicentennial Commission is trying to organize people for this celebration by groups of tens of millions. For instance, they expect 40,000,000 members of fraternal and patriotic bodies to take an active part. And at least 10,000,000 boy and girl members of 4-H clubs, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. W. C. A. and other junior organizations.

Then it adds up all the church members and says they will actively participate, too. Finally it takes the entire population of the country and asserts that all but those who are hopelessly bedridden will attend some ceremony, pageant, service or special exercise in honor of George Washington at some time during the celebration period. Shut-ins will get it by radio.

Sport Program
There's no space to tell about the prolonged national Bicentennial sports program, the Bicentennial cherry blossom fete in April, the Bicentennial marathon to be run from Mount Vernon to the Monument "with detours to historic points," the Fourth of July celebration which will center around the Declaration of Independence up at the Library of Congress, Lafayette Day when 3000 visiting French veterans will march in a huge veterans' Parade, Fraternal Day in October when all American fraternal groups hold a big ceremonial here, Columbus Day and another large pageant, Armistice Day here under American Legion supervision with pilgrimages from everywhere, or Farmers' Day, Nov. 10, when the national farm organizations will stage festivals and a national harvest demonstration. Or about the various state day celebrations, observing anniversaries of independence or admission to the Union.

But they do say that more than 500,000 Masons will be in this vicinity for the dedication of the George Washington Masonic Memorial at Alexandria from May 9 to 13. And no week will go by when some national organization is having a convention with Bicentennial features, or some group of foreign blood isn't celebrating its special day or some large group of folks isn't putting on a demonstration of one kind or another.

TROOP 8 BOY SCOUTS HEAR TALK ON ARCHERY
A talk on archery was given by Charles Wilkner at the weekly meeting of Troop 8 boy scouts in First Congregational church Tuesday evening. His talk was followed by a demonstration. William Buchanan, troop committeeman, attended the meeting.

BEG PARDON
H. E. Jahneke, who was arraigned in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg yesterday on charges of passing a worthless check, is not from Appleton, as was stated in Tuesday's Post-Crescent. The H. E. Jahneke referred to lives in Green Bay.

NO CONTAGION FOUND IN CITY LAST WEEK
A perfect health record was attained last week, when no cases of contagion were reported to Theodore Sanders, deputy health officer. At present there are only three or four cases of whooping cough and one case of diphtheria under quarantine in Appleton.

FORESTER INSPECTS COUNTY TREE PLOTS

F. B. Trenk, extension forester with the state and federal forestry departments, is spending two days in Outagamie-co. With Gus Sell, county agent, Mr. Trenk will inspect ten farms whose owners have made application with Mr. Sell for wind break planting demonstrations. About 5,000 tree seedlings are available for this type of work in the county and Mr. Trenk and Mr. Sell will recommend to the county agricultural committee those sites which are best suited for demonstrations this fall. Mr. Trenk and Mr. Sell also will inspect five county forestry plots, which were planted in the last three years by the rural schools of the county. These plots are in the towns of Ellington, Horton, Maine, Oneida and Grand Chute.

DISCUSS CLAIM OF FREEDOM FARMER

The county highway committee, at a special meeting yesterday afternoon, discussed a claim presented by Frank Murphy, town of Freedom, for damages to his property as the result of rerouting Highway 55 between Kaukauna and Freedom. This work was done last summer, but Mr. Murphy's claim has been pending ever since. A. L. Hambrecht of the state highway commission also attended the meeting. No definite settlement was reached and the committee is to meet again in the near future.

The Story of Sue
by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BARBARA's voice had shattered the spell which her eyes had woven. Jean noticed it. Sue could read it in his face.

"Jack, doesn't it seem queer that once upon a time I was not such an awfully long time ago . . . you and I had planned to take this step together?"

Jack's chin grew a little stubborn. He made some half-laughing answer and changed the subject. The car was stopping in front of the church. The same church where Sarah and Ted had taken vows a little while before.

And then it seemed to Sue that she and Jack were adrift in a sea of strange twilight. A dim dusk where the dream-blues and lingering purples of the windows were very remote as dusk came on. The organist was practicing and her fingers were catching wisps of music, enchanted, ethereal, and letting them go drifting through the gloom. She had been at the organ for that other marriage, Sue remembered. She understood now, why Sarah had been a little white, a little tremulous. Marriage in a church was so sacred. A forever and ever affair.

Then the minister was beginning his ceremony.

Jack's profile, clean and young and eager, kept coming between her and the minister's voice.

" . . . God has ordained that a man shall leave his father and his mother and cleave unto his wife" . . . that was what Jack had done. He had turned away from his father to defend her father for her. He had been tried and stood the test. Then there was something about giving "your lives as a sacred gift, each one to the other."

The minister was looking at her now and the organ music was very sweet and dream-enchanted, as though the one who played had gone down a magic path and found something very lovely . . . Pan's time-healed pipes, perhaps, or a fairy asleep among the daisies.

Sue's eyes were as serious as those of any vestal virgin who ever took high vows, as she met those of the minister.

"Do you, Sue, take this man to be your lawful and wedded companion through life, to have and to hold from this time forward, in sickness or in health, for better or worse, in fortune and in adversity and forsaking all others to cleave unto him and him only, until death do you part?"

"I do." Her voice was deep and husky but it carried the words.

Then the minister was asking Jack the same question and his answer came in a strong voice, and it, too, was vibrant.

Why, marriage, Sue was thinking almost unconsciously, was something deep and true and lasting . . . when it was meant to be, trivial things couldn't prevent it . . . misunderstandings had to come right, distances had to be bridged.

The minister was asking them to unite right hands. She caught the rhythm of the words and asked "While this ring encircles her finger may love and joy encircle both of your lives." This ring was on her finger, the minister was saying old, old words. What God had put together, let no man put asunder. Funny that Jack should have worried about misunderstandings. There wouldn't be any . . .

NEXT: A cloud.

PERFUMES ARE EFFECTIVE IF APPLIED RIGHT

BY ALICIA HART

The art of applying perfume is a delicate one. Don't put a dab behind each ear and one on the front of your dress and expect the odor to be subtle.

An atomizer is the best thing to use in putting on your perfume. Be sure and select one which is mechanically perfect as well as pretty to look at. The bulb must be made of a good grade rubber, the tube which you insert into the bottle should not be too big in diameter and should be long enough to reach practically to the bottom, and the metal top on the atomizer should be constructed in such a manner that the spray will be as fine as mist. Don't buy one until you have tried it out to see just how fine the spray is.

Lingerie should be sprayed several days before it is to be worn.

Remember that perfume is liable to discolor your clothes so do not dab it on the outside of a dainty frock. Use an atomizer, or at least apply it where it won't show if it does spot.

Select your perfumes to suit your personality. And you'll need more than one odor. For instance, you will need a much lighter scent for daytime and particularly for street wear than you use in the evening. If you are a small, rather delicate blonde, choose fresh unsophisticated single-flower odors. Don't go in for spicy exotic perfumes. Leave those for the brunets.

You get a more intriguing, tantalizing effect when perfume is applied to your skin instead of your clothes. Keeping sachet among your lingerie and on your clothes hangers is an ideal way of stressing fragrance. Be sure that the odor of your sachet and your perfume is the same. Keep your evening lingerie in a separate drawer with sachet which matches your evening perfume.

Your bath salts should be the same or at least harmonize with your perfume. If you use a pine or out-of-doors odor in your bath and then apply gardenia or some other exotic perfume, you have spoiled the effect of both. If you are going in for heavy perfumes, see that your sachet and bath salts blend with it.

MYSTERIOUS SILENCES UNFAIR—GIRL MAY WANT TO AID WORRIED JOB SEEKER

Dear Miss Vane: I am in rather hard luck at present and want your advice badly. I am in love with the right sort of girl and she seems to care for me. But just last month I lost my job, and times being what they are, I couldn't find another one. I'm still looking and getting more and more discouraged. In the meantime I hate to call her up and tell her the bad news so have just let things slide. I suppose she would be sympathetic, and I hate to accept her pity. I have enough pride to want to face her only when I have my self-respect back. But I am afraid she will forget me in the meantime. Please advise.

DISCOURAGED.

And it would serve you darned well right if she did forget you, young fellow? This little trick of yours has been practiced by so many well-meaning young chaps, that the subject is worth an article right now.

How do you suppose that girl of yours is feeling these days—waiting for the telephone to ring, hoping for a letter, expecting every moment that you'll appear to explain this mysterious conduct of yours? Do you think she's a mind-reader? Do you think that if she cares for you she has not tortured herself with a hundred vain questions since you decided to go in for long unbroken silences?

And if you trust her, if you really believe she's the right sort, what proof are you giving of your confidence in her—to drop her the minute you need help? Isn't you pride a pretty selfish thing if it condemns the girl you love to suspense—and shuts her away from you when she could best aid you?

Be sensible now and admit that you're behaving unfairly. You think you're doing a splendid thing in cutting her out of your life till you're a great big success. But it doesn't occur to you that she may want to have some part in your life, even as it is, and that since you two love each other, you have no right to decide a thing like this all by yourself. If you're really fond of her and anxious to make her happy, give her the chance to decide what will make her happy.

Just forget your own pride, and your own side of the matter for the moment and concentrate on consideration for the girl you profess to love. Are you going on giving her a bad time, just because some notion has crept into that mind of yours and will not be dislodged?

Be sensible, tell her the truth at once and let her decide what she will do about the situation.

$125,000 BOND ISSUE APPROVED FOR NEW SCHOOL

Council Proceeds With Plans for Erection of New Fifth Ward Building

Menasha—Proposed construction of the fifth ward school was approved by the common council Tuesday evening. The ordinance adopted by unanimous vote the initial resolution providing for a $125,000 bond issue. The issue will provide funds for the site, building and equipment of a new fifth ward school and for the site of a fourth ward school to be constructed later on.

Action on the bond issue resolution followed a short council recess and was preceded by little discussion. The bonds will be of $1,000 denomination and will pay 4 1/2 percent interest. Beginning in March, 1933, $15,000 on the principle will be paid each year for seven years. The remaining $20,000 will be paid in 1940.

Returns from the water and light plant, covering taxes and interest, on the city's equity in the plant will be available each year to meet necessary payments on the new school bonds, and no additional burden will be placed on city taxpayers, city officials explained.

The initial resolution will be published the required number of times for 60 days before the final resolution is passed.

Site Is Recommended

The meeting opened with the reading and acceptance of three resolutions presented by the board of education, relative to site purchases. The site recommended for the fifth ward school includes several lots in block 26 of the fifth ward, adjacent to First, Second and Kenosha streets. The fourth ward school site includes all lots in block six, Round's addition, including property between De Pere and Appleton streets and between Eighth and Ninth streets. A third recommendation, relative to the purchase of several lots along the river front for playground purchases also was accepted.

Purchase of the fourth and fifth ward school sites was provided in the bond issue resolution, but following acceptance of the school board's recommendation, no further action on the purchase of the river frontage was taken.

Final approval of the school project was practically assured at a conference meeting of aldermen, the board of education, the water and light commission and the park board in the council chambers Monday evening. Information relative to the need and advisability of the immediate school construction was discussed and the approval of all aldermen present voiced.

Want More Police

The matter of additional police was brought before the council again Tuesday evening in a recommendation from the police and fire commission. The commission urged that an officer be stationed at the Brin theatre corner during the hours of heavy traffic in that vicinity and the mayor referred the matter to the committee of the whole with the police and fire committee to bring in a report. Further action may be taken at the next council session.

A fire protection plan involving cities throughout the Fox River Valley and vicinity, relative to inter city fire department assistance whenever unusually large fires and other emergencies demand, was presented to the council and referred by the mayor to the city attorney, the fire department chief and the fire and city hall committee.

Applications for soft drink parlor operators' licenses were received from A. J. Marx and J. Zemlock, both of 54 Broadway street, by recommendation of the police committee, the application of A. J. Marx was granted.

ROADS DEBATE NEW PROPOSAL BY COMMISSION

Surcharges Would Enable Carriers to Provide for Interest on Bonds

at all, only temporarily and that its ultimate effect, not very long postponed, would be to harm rather than help the railroads. It is similarly our conclusion that such an increase would raise rates upon many kinds of traffic above a just and reasonable level. This latter conclusion applies particularly to the products of agriculture, including livestock.

The commission after reaching its conclusions went into the railroad future.

Reflect Conditions

"The most effective remedy for the immediate ills of the railroads is the economic recovery of the country," it said. "The present low earnings are not the result of low rates but reflect general industrial conditions. The earnings will continue to reflect those conditions as business improves just as they have in the past.

"While the tide may be slow in turning, there is no more reason for thinking that business will not improve than there was in 1928 for thinking that depressions were a thing of the past and that we were in an era of permanent prosperity. Public emotion swings from one extreme to the other and there is nothing more volatile than the emotion of the investing public. When railroad earnings take a sharp turn upward, as in due time they will, railroad credit will also rise.

"There are many things which can be done to improve the situation, some of them by congress, some by state legislatures, some by this commission and the state commissions and some by the railroads themselves.

An important step is the repeal of Section 15 A (the fair return section of the transportation act) and the substitution of a better section designed to accomplish the same general purpose. We recommended such legislation last year in a special report to congress and shall renew the recommendation in our annual report this year. The present recapture provisions impose in their enforcement a vast expenditure of time and money upon both the government and the railroads, they provoke litigation over complicated questions of valuation and accounting, they encourage extravagant expenditures by the more prosperous companies when times are good, they hang like a cloud over the credit of many companies when times are bad, and under the present law there is no effective way of using the funds for public advantage if they are recaptured."

The commission also discussed other necessary changes in the railroad laws, as well as to the need of regulation of trucks and automobiles. The only dissent was in the opinion of the Commissioner Tate who objected to any increase at this time but agreed with the other commissioners that any increase granted should be directed toward paying interest on bonds of all the carriers.

NEENAH SOCIETY

Neenah—Plans for the annual Senior class dancing party to be given on the evening of Nov. 14 at the high school gymnasium are being completed by class committees. The party will be for high school students of both Neenah and Menasha and will be on the evening of the Neenah-Menasha football game.

The cleanup committee includes J. Kuehl, chairman, C. Asmus, W. Boerson, A. Graef, D. Smith, K. Staffeld, H. Kruse and W. Kehn.

For the first time in many years a picnic was held on Oct. 20 at Riverside park. The warm weather Tuesday attracted several families to the park.

"Japanese Women" was the subject of a talk given Tuesday evening by Mrs. V. S. Ryan, Appleton, at the third annual Y. M. C. A. membership dinner. Mrs. Ryan, who lived in Japan for a number of years, portrayed the Japanese women of 15 years ago and her sister of today.

Mrs. Neale Spore presided at the banquet, and Mrs. S. D. Greenwood, president of the association, conducted the short business meeting at which members of the nominating committee were elected. They are Miss Ruth Sparks, chairman; Mrs. E. M. Beeman, Mrs. E. W. Griswold, Mrs. H. E. Bullard, Mrs. O. T. Thompson, Mrs. Willbur Sparks and Miss George McKay.

Miss Gertrude Konchko and Dorothy Pfoffenrath sang two numbers, and Menasha high school band members furnished saxophone and xylophone music. A feature of the entertainment was a crystal gazer in the person of Miss Ruth Sparks. Community singing was conducted by Mrs. Albert Bachman.

Builds Pretty Pool At Total Cost Of Only $4

Grand Rapids, Mich.—An inexpensive pool, which will lend the enchantment of water, flowers, drinking birds and perhaps goldfish to the home garden, can be built by any amateur.

A local gardener has completed such a pool which, although it is not ornate, adds a touch of variety to the garden, and at a cost of only $4.

Eighteen cement blocks had been left after construction of a porch foundation, and these were used as the basis of the pool. In a shallow trench they were placed, six on a side and three across each end. The blocks were cemented together at the ends.

The ground inside the rows of blocks was hollowed out. Two discarded pieces of metal pipe were joined together with an elbow and placed in one corner to provide for overflow of the pool. The pipe drains into a tile placed in the ground outside the pool.

body of Miss Samuelson had been dismembered, portions of it being found in one of the trunks and in the suitcase.

Lloyd J. Andrews, county attorney for Maricopa-co, Arizona, arrived last night by plane from Phoenix.

Can't Prove Motive

"We have considered the woman's probable jealousy of her husband as a motive, but we cannot prove it," said Andrews. "The women themselves over one of the trio and the so-called narcotic and liquor angles, but they are all insufficient to prove a motive," said Andrews.

"The principal thing in the case now, as I see it, is that Mrs. Judd is missing, and a motive for the crime lacking. The first and most important thing is to capture Mrs. Judd."

The Rev. H. J. McKinnell, retired minister, from his home at Arlington, Ill., expressed confidence in the innocence of his daughter.

"I am worried, of course, but I know that my daughter could not be involved in such an affair," he said.

The minister's son, however, last night wrote a letter to his parents which read:

"Dear folks, I suppose the greatest catastrophe imaginable has come across our lives. . . . Ruth is accused of a great crime. Circumstantial evidence seems to be against her. She has told me nothing and I want to know nothing unless she is caught by the law and gives herself up and is brought to trial. . . . I want you, mom, to go back through letters you have of Ruth's which would be evidence to show her insanity. Many of the letters are incoherent and contradictory. The girl is mentally off balance, I am sure."

TELLS OF TRUNK TRANSFER

Phoenix, Ariz. (AP)—Details of the transfer of a "terribly heavy" trunk for Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd have been related by Richard M. Swartz to assist in solution of the murder of Miss Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes LeRoi.

Swartz, a truck driver for a transfer company, told investigators of the district attorney's office he was called the night of Oct. 17 to the LeRoi-Samuelson apartment.

Every one manifest at the time of the movement of the trunk was added today to the evidence officers assert points to Mrs. Judd as the slayer. The victims were not seen alive after 9:35 p. m., Oct. 16.

Swartz said he found the apartment in darkness. At the door was a woman he later identified from a photograph as Mrs. Judd.

"I want this trunk taken to the station," she said.

Swartz stumbled over the threshold as he entered.

"I'm sorry," he said Mrs. Judd told him, "I'm going away and have had the lights turned off. You'll have to get along as best you can in the dark."

She led him to the rear of the apartment, and pointed out a big trunk. He was unable to lift it from the floor.

"What," he asked, "is in that to make it so heavy?"

"Books," Mrs. Judd replied briefly.

Turned on Light

Swartz summoned two friends who had ridden up with him on the trunk. Together they dragged the trunk out and placed it aboard. Mrs. Judd checked the door and then exclaimed she had locked her keys inside. Swartz offering to help her, she turned off the bathroom window, which was open, and crawled in. He admitted Mrs. Judd through the front door.

Mrs. Judd, he said, went to the bathroom to close the window and dropped her keys. With an exclamation, she pushed the light switch, and the lights came on. Swartz said he was surprised, but that Mrs. Judd said nothing, swooped up the keys, turned off the lights, and scolded him from the front door.

The house safely locked, he informed Mrs. Judd he could not take the trunk to the railroad station unless she would accompany it, since it was apparent the weight charge upon it would be excessive.

She then told him to take it to 1130 Brill-st, which later investigation proved to be her own home. Police learned the same trunk, in company with a smaller one, was taken to the railroad station Sunday by H. U. Grimm, owner of the apartment, at the request of Mrs. Judd, for shipment to Los Angeles.

Although they had the testimony of one neighbor that three shots were heard from the victims' apartment the night of Oct. 16 and police had found bloodstains there investigators were unable to determine definitely where the slayings were perpetrated.

Lorraine Funk, Mildred Friemserberger and Jerome Hoffman had their tonsils removed Wednesday at Theda Clark hospital.

NEW ELECTRIC RATE FAVORED BY ALDERMEN

Schedule Goes Into Effect This Month Upon Order of State Body

Special to Post-Crescent

New London—The council meeting Tuesday night was devoted chiefly to a discussion of the new electric rate schedule which by order of the state, became effective this month. This commission, after an examination of the city's books, found that the city light and waterworks department was realizing earnings of $15,000 in excess of what is necessary. As a result of these findings a new scale was proposed which will be an innovation so far as the state is concerned. The new plan was approved by the local council.

Radical changes are now in effect in meter charges, the resident lighting rate calling for a service or meter charge of 25 cents. The first 15 kilowatts will cost five cents, the next 15 four cents. All over 30 kilowatts, one and three quarters cents. The old rate was: first 15 kilowatts, 9 cents; the next 30, eight cents; and over 50, three cents. The heating and cooking rate calls for a service charge of $1. The rate per kilowatt is now 13 cents, which formerly was 3 cents. The commercial rate calls for a meter charge of 75 cents per month, and the energy charge for 30 kilowatts 6 cents, the next 30, five cents, and over 60, five cents. The old rate was: first 50 kilowatts, nine cents; the next 50, eight cents; the next 400, seven cents, and over 500, five cents.

Power rates also took a drop. The new rate will be: first 200 kilowatts, four cents; the next 400, three and one half cents; and the next 400, two and one half cents. The next 2000, two and one half cents; the next 4000, one and one half cents. According to the old Power rate consumers were taxed as follows: the first 100 seven cents; the next 200, five cents; the next 200, four cents; the next 1500 three cents; and over 2000, two and one-half cents.

Practically the only persons to fall to benefit by this new order are those who have been using from 10 to 15 kilowatts for home lighting purposes. This would affect a few business houses which have used less than 34 kilowatts. In both cases the monthly bills of these users will be a trifle higher.

The council granted a building permit to Lancing McPaul, who plans to erect a dwelling in the Stinson addition. A letter was read to the council by Mayor E. W. Wendland from the American Legion thanking the city for giving this body free light and water during the recent Labor day home coming.

Chuck Sanders, Appleton, vs. Sparky Ahl, Oshkosh, 132 pounds.

WHAT appears to be the best amateur fight program here in several months will be staged at armory G Thursday evening under direction of Onsey Johnston post of the American legion. There will be six bouts featuring the best of amateur talent and the first bout will go on the boards at 8.30.

Harold Cotter, Kaukauna veteran and Hans Ahl, Oshkosh, are booked in the windup battle, the weights to be about 145 pounds. Cotter is a veteran performer who won a decision from Herbie Thompson last week and who probably has had more battles than any other fighter appearing on local cards.

He is a hard puncher, stands flat footed and waits for his opponent to come in and do battle. However, he doesn't like body blows and isn't so good at evading over hand rights. He has appeared on many local cards but hasn't been a favorite because he refused to fight. Recently when he asked to show here, he was told fans didn't care much for him and in return promised to stage a merry brawl. He therefore was given the opportunity with Cotter as the opponent.

May Meet Knauer
Both boys are ambitious chaps who this year hope to climb the heights. The winner has been promised a go with Frankie Knauer, Milwaukee sensation, and of course each hopes he'll be returned the winner. Knauer is rated the best of the amateurs in Wisconsin and is Central Amateur Athletic Union champion.

Zep Traurig and Jules Legier in the semi-windup stand a good chance of stealing the show. They are 122 pounders who mix like a couple game cocks whenever they get together and assure there'll be plenty of action flying.

They had fought here several times in the last couple years and always has given his best. Legier is a stranger to local fans but not to Traurig who he fought at Oshkosh last year. The Sawdust city mix was a peach and it's a bet Thursday night's will be another.

West Meets Milwaukee
Art West, rugged, hard punching Appleton youngster is in the fourth bout of the evening and has drawn for his opponent a chap from Milwaukee. West has had his own way with most opponents around here and the Milwaukee being secured to give him a merry chase. "Pop" Higgins, veteran Milwaukee trainer has vouch'd for Manko and "Pop's" word should be enough.

The "heavyweight" card of the evening will feature two boys weighing not more than 155 pounds. They are Johnny Fuest, Appleton, a youngster who came here from down state, and Luke Ebel, Two Rivers, brother of that weird performer, Adolf Ebel. Both are reported to be mighty clever batters Fuest claiming he was a golden glove competitor a few years ago. Ebel has fought here on one or two previous occasions.

The second fight for Thursday will show Billy Schuller, hard hitting Combined Locks fighter pitted against Hank Hartman of Oshkosh. Schuller won a fight here last month from an Oshkosh boy who was more or less short on experience. Hartman will give him much more of a battle, legion officers claim.

Chuck Sanders, Appleton, and Sparky Ahl, brother of Hans, are slated to raise the curtain and they may go further and raise the roof. Sanders, last year a right handed puncher, has developed since then into a two fisted chap with a kick in either glove.

Sparky Ahl is a veteran of one season but one who has been learning fast, especially when under tutelage of brother Hans. The battle should see a slugger against a boxer, and a most interesting go to say the least.

The promoters were a bit disappointed over last month's turnout of fans for they figured they had a good card Thursday's bouts are even better than those of last month and if a dull house can't be turned out, the matchmakers want to know what the fans want. They have given every assurance possible that the card tomorrow will be a humdinger from the first gong.

Seats have been on sale at usual places for several days. Reports are they are going fast because of the interest in the Ahl-Cotter fight, a bout that seems to have appealed to popular imagination—especially over near Kaukauna.

One and One

IN the table of averages covering the recent "little world" series between Rochester, champion of the International League, and St. Paul of the American Association, appeared at the top the name of George Sisler. He batted 1.000.

In one game Sisler was once at bat. He singled. That may have been his last time at bat, for after the series he was released. There was something magnificent about that last blow by old George, as if it were a last gesture of defiance to unfriendly fates. Here was a used-up ball player at the plate, a badly used-up player at that. His legs were shaky and his eyes were a bit blurry, but when the pitcher hurled that white streak toward the plate, George for an instant reclaimed his lost greatness.

Sports Question Box

Q. Is it possible for the Field Umpire to call a balk against the pitcher? I have always understood that it was only the Umpire-in-Chief who could call a balk.

A. The Field Umpire may call a balk against the pitcher. Sometimes he can see, whether the pitcher has his foot on the plate or not, while it is impossible for the Umpire-in-Chief to see the position of the pitcher.

Q. What is the best blow to use to beat a body attack? That is, a fighter who concentrates on punching to the body?

A. It all depends on the method used by the fighter to get in close. If he lowers his head, use an uppercut. Otherwise it is best to time the charge and cross sharply with the right to the jaw.

Q.—What are the dimensions of a four-wall handball court?

A.—Standard courts should all have four walls and ceiling. They shall not be less than 20 feet wide, 40 feet long and 20 feet high and not more than 25 feet wide, 50 feet long and 25 feet high. The ideal dimensions are twenty-five feet wide and forty-six feet long.

Q.—I am a good tennis player of 14 in a girl's school. Now they insist I must play field hockey in the fall except on Saturdays and Sundays. What shall I do?

A. Do as your physical director tells you. A little let-down in tennis after a summer of play will do no harm.

Q. Was there ever a time when a base on balls was credited as a single to the batsman?

A. Yes. It was in force one year and then the absurdity of it became manifest and it was abolished.

Three Other Guys

Meanwhile the world series, the big big world series, was staged, and in the cast of characters were three people named respectively Roettger, High and Flowers. Roettger was brought in from Cincinnati in a trade for Douthitt, going from a last place club to share in the world series spoils. High was brought back from the Cincinnati farm at Rochester in time to get his cut of the big money. Jake Flowers, after some indifferent years with Brooklyn, fell into world series fortune when the Cardinals felt the need of an extra infielder.

Here were three ball players who at their best hardly could be mentioned in the same breath with Sisler at his worst. They each took down approximately $4,500 for their services on the bench and in the field in seven games.

Yet Sisler, ranking with the greatest players of all time, never got into a world series ball game.

Sisler's Battle
Chosen by acclaim the most valuable ball player of 1922, Sisler was robbed by illness of his eighth straight season of 1923 he could not see a moving baseball. He used to sit in an obscure box, his eyes shaded by heavy amber glasses, trying to connect the blur before his eyes with the sounds of action on the field so he could know what was going on.

And, in 1924, as manager of the Browns, seeing only from his left eye, he hit .303! In the following year he hit .315.

He fought hard to come back, and even with one eye he was perhaps the best first baseman in his league. His wonderful natural grace and agility helped to save him for a few more seasons.

Finally came the inevitable decline. The other day, when George batted 1.000 for Rochester, he was 39 years old. Almost through? All washed up?

Yes, but he was once at bat and, whether he was all through or not, he pulled back and crashed the ball. Yes, he did! Knowing Sisler, you could be pretty sure he would.

'STEP-LADDER' BOUTS BANNED IN NEW YORK

Commissioner Muldoon Halts Plans for Carnera-Uzcudun Fight

New York.—(AP)—The New York state athletic commission has turned thumbs down on a heavyweight bout between Primo Carnera and Paulino Uzcudun on the grounds that it would be a "step-ladder" match.

Listen to William Muldoon on the subject:

"In the future we will insist that heavyweights must be well matched physically as well as in other respects. Carnera should fight men of his own size like Victorio Campolo, Arthur De Kuh, and Jose Santa, we don't want any more step-ladder matches, where one of the principals needs a soap box to reach the other's chin. I was against the Walker-Sharkey match for that matter and only approved it against my better judgment."

Carnera and Uzcudun were matched for a ten rounder at Madison Square Garden Nov. 13 for a theatrical charity sponsored by Daniel Frohman. Uzcudun, despite his lack of weight, gave Primo a close battle when they met at Baltimore months ago.

Jimmy Johnston, new general manager for the garden, now hopes to persuade Campolo to take Paulino's place against Carnera.

COMISKEY SUFFERS RELAPSE; "VERY LOW"

Eagle River.—(AP)—Charles Albert Comiskey, 73, owner of the Chicago White Sox baseball club, who has been in ill health at his summer home near here for some time, was reported today to have suffered a relapse. Members of the household said he was "very low."

Other inmates registered on the Roller lineup are MacArthur, St. Mary's; Brennan, Georgetown; So-fish, Grove City; and Pyne, Holy Cross. From tackle to tackle the Providence line will average 300 pounds. Adding Rose and Spellman at ends, the entire wall will average 306, and the starting backfield of Timmas, Pae, Woodruff and Shelly will make the entire team average 198 pounds.

Series Proved Nothing About The New Baseballs

BY JOHN B. FOSTER Copyright 1931

NEW YORK.—(CFA)—There was a great deal of whimsy circulating this past season about the new ball used in the major leagues. Here are some figures compiled today on the batting in the 1931 world series that add to the whiffiness.

In four games played with the National league ball, the St. Louis Cardinals made 28 hits, an average of seven hits per game. In the same games the Philadelphia Athletics made 29 hits, an average of 7 1/2 hits per game.

The Cardinals, therefore, if anything is to be gathered from this, liked the American league ball better than the National league ball, while the Athletics preferred the National league ball. The latter has a thicker cover than the American league ball. Both have raised stitches.

There has been many a statement that the National league ball was made a hit with the American, and yet the Athletics made one more hit in four games than the St. Louis players made.

Bishop broke even, two hits with each ball. Haas made three with the National league ball and one with the American. Cochrane never made a hit with the American, and three with the National. Simmons liked home trade and hit the American ball safely six times and the National only three. Foxe loaned the other way with five safe hits with

GREEN BAY PACKERS MEET PROVIDENCE IN "HOMECOMING" GAME

Steamrollers Almost Defeated New York Giants Last Weekend

GREEN BAY.—Plans to spoil the 1931 Packer Homecoming celebration, which have been formulated by the Providence Steam Rollers, may be substantiated by the hefty New England eleven, which is prepared to place plenty of talent on the field at City stadium next Sunday, when the first whistle announces the 2 o'clock kickoff. Advance notices of the talent contained in the Providence line and backfield indicates that the strong National league outfit has resumed its interrupted pennant drive, which brought it to the top of the league standings in 1929.

Eastern sport writers have been turning in columns about a star half-back named Dexter Shelly, one time University of Texas star and all-Southern team selection, who has come into his own as the directing agent of a strong Providence passing attack. Back in the days when the New England team was driving to its first—and only—national championship, there was a back named George Wilson, who did most of the flipping in the Roller backfield. When Wilson left, the Providence attack crumbled, but this year Shelly has taken his place, and in early season games has shown every indication of passing his opposition ragged.

Tosses Passes

It was a shower of passes by Shelly which turned the trick against Philadelphia, and all but dragged Providence's New York game out of the fire. He weighs 190 pounds and is a constant threat after the ball. In the Roller backfield is a constant threat after the ball. In the Roller backfield is a constant threat after the ball.

Oran Pape, Iowa ace who weighs 180 and saw fleeting service with the Packers last season; Herb Timmas, Syracuse quarterback, voted the most valuable player to his university in his under graduate days; and Lew Pope, who was an important cog in Purdue's 1930 attack.

Quarterback of backfield stars probably will start next Sunday's game for Providence, although Pope, if not in the starting lineup, will certainly see plenty of action. Woodruff, Mississippi fullback, is slated to do the heavy pushing in that position.

Other reliable backs who may and will see service are Olen Brown, a number of reliable line performers who will make things lively for the Packer forward wall. Tex Irvin, captain of the 1930 Davis and Ellkins West Virginia eleven, holds down a tackle position, and Pup Graham, a brawny guard who was an all-National league star with the Dayton Tornadoes, will line up at center in the Providence lineup. Each weighs 220 pounds. Ray Smith, center, is one of Missouri university's famous Smith brothers, and although he weighs but 180, has displayed plenty of drive for the Steam Rollers.

Eschbach, Penn State center, probably will start in that position, flanked by Graham and Gentry, the latter an Oklahoma man, at guards. The tackle posts will be occupied by Irvin and Schein, the last named player once having held down the same assignment at Brown university. Rose of Texas and Spellman of Brown, both weighing 200 pounds, will start at the end positions.

Henry Forward Wall
Other inmates registered on the Roller lineup are MacArthur, St. Mary's; Brennan, Georgetown; So-fish, Grove City; and Pyne, Holy Cross. From tackle to tackle the Providence line will average 300 pounds. Adding Rose and Spellman at ends, the entire wall will average 306, and the starting backfield of Timmas, Pae, Woodruff and Shelly will make the entire team average 198 pounds.

Holley gained 204 yards in 21 tries during Alabama's first football game of the year.

Frankie Frisch, Cardinal Captain, Second Baseman Is Named Most Valuable Player

Chuck Klein Second While Bill Terry, Giants, Rates Third

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The National league's "most valuable player" for 1931 is Frankie Frisch, captain and second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals, champions of the world.

Frisch received 65 points out of a maximum of 80 in the vote of a committee of baseball writers to win the award by ten points from Chuck Klein, Phillies' outfielder, with Bill Terry, first baseman of the New York Giants, a close third with 53.

Officially the practice of naming annually the "most valuable player" was dropped in 1929 by the National league. In 1930, Hack Wilson of the Chicago Cubs was selected by an unofficial poll conducted by the Associated Press and the Cubs received the award by handing Wilson the customary $1,000. This year the poll was conducted, unofficially again, by the Baseball Writers' Association of America of which William J. Stocum of New York is president.

Cards Win Four Times
In the eight years that a most valuable player has been selected in the Heydler loop, St. Louis players have been adjudged the winners four times. Rogers Hornsby started the St. Louis parade in 1925 followed by Bob O'Farrell in 1926, Jim Bottomley in 1928 and Frisch this year. Dazzy Vance won the first award, in 1924, Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, in 1927, Hornsby as a member of the Cubs in 1929 and Wilson last year.

Frisch has been a contender for the honor thrice previously. He finished third to Vance in 1924 as a member of the New York Giants; second to Waner in 1927 and second to Wilson last season.

The Cardinals captain and Terry were the only players this year to score points on all eight of the writers' ballots with Klein placing on seven of them. Frisch was given only one vote for first place but received five votes for second, one for fourth and one for eighth.

The complete vote with totals for each player follows:

Frisch, St. Louis, 65; Klein, Phillies, 55; Terry, New York, 53; English, Chicago, 30; Hafey, St. Louis, 29; Wilson, St. Louis, 28; Jackson, New York, 24; Grimm, Chicago, 21; Adams, St. Louis, 18; Brandt, Boston, 15; Marvyn, Boston, 15; Cuyler, Chicago, 14; Traynor, Pittsburgh, 12; Lucas, Cincinnati, 10; Lloyd Waner, Pirates, 8; Bottomley, St. Louis, 8; Jim Elliott, Philadelphia, 6; Quinn, Brooklyn, 5; Finn, Brooklyn, 5; Clark, Brooklyn, 3; Derringer, St. Louis, 3; Bartel, Philadelphia, 2; Verge, New York, 2; Fitzsimmons, New York, 1; O'Dell and Wright, Brooklyn, 1 each; Cuccinello, Cincinnati, 1; Geibert, St. Louis, 1.

Honorable mention: Meine and Theonow Pirates; Bissonette, Brooklyn, Martin, Grimes, Johnson and Hallahan, St. Louis; Hogan, Walker and Mitchell, New York; Davis and Whitney, Philadelphia; Durocher, Hendrick and Stripling, Cincinnati; Berger, Boston, Hartnett, Chicago.

After drilling so intensively in preparation for the Purdue aerial game the Badgers seemed to have no trouble in diagnosing the Penn pass plays and smothering them with ease. Fighting for regular posts in the line the Badger reserves in the forward line smeared the freshmen whenever the backs chose to try the front door.

More than 200 Badger football fans turned out to see the Cardinal in action as Coach Thistlethwaite again abandoned secret practice.

CLAUDE PERRY WILL REMAIN WITH BAYS

Claude Perry of the Green Bay Packers isn't to be loaned to the Chicago Cardinals, it was announced by Packer officers a few days ago. He will be retained by the club for the season and some backfield man turned loose. Perry has been with the club about five years and last week, it was said, he would be loaned to the Chicago team. Apparently the club suffered a change of heart.

GRIMSON FLASHES RUNNING ATTACK

Holmes, Chief Ground Gainer, Still in Bed With Heavy Cold

Ripon.—For the first time since the first week of fall drills, the Ripon college Redmen Tuesday flashed an offensive which dazzled a sturdy yearling eleven and gave the Crimson coaches renewed hope for a successful running attack against Ripon's remaining opponents, Lawrence, Carroll and Michigan State.

Restored from their exacting victory over Cornell, Coach Carl Doehling's varsity ran roughshod over the freshmen in a spirited scrimmage session, showing the offensive strength which was evident in pre-season workouts. Regulars and reserves were alternated and each combination was effective against Coach Red Martin's Frosh.

With the chief ground gainer, "Cy" Holmes, still on the casualty list, the Redmen backfield found its scoring sparkplugs in the persons of Clarence Lefty and little Johnny Cole, the midget speed merchant. The former has sparked in weekly workouts in the last two weeks, but has not been called upon for regular games. Lefty may get on the firing line in the Lawrence fracas if Holmes does not make a speedy recovery from an intense cold which has kept him in bed since the Cornell victory.

RESERVED SEATS
Reserved seats for the Lawrence-Ripon football game already are on sale at Beach Sport Shop, according to college sports officers. Two sections are being reserved, one on the far side the field for Ripon and one on the Lawrence side the grid for Viking supporters.

SPORT CLUB SOCCER TEAM IDLE THIS WEEK

Appleton sport club soccer team will enjoy a rest this week from its Sunday afternoon activities, no game having been scheduled. The club has won three and lost two games this season.

Last Sunday the Appleton club went down to Sheboygan and was defeated by Bayern No. 1 team by a score of 3 and 0. In the first half Appleton, playing with the wind and sun kept the score at 0 and 0, the Bayern defense starring as the Appleton forwards rushed the goal.

In the second half with the elements against them the Appleton team was scored on three times.

WILDCATS WORRIED AS KEN MENNAN IS HURT IN PRACTICE

Sam Willaman, Ohio State,
Setting Up Defense for N.
W. Passes

BY PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—Ken Mennan, coach of the Northwestern football team, was worried about his team's chances of winning the game against the Ohio State team Saturday. The muscles in his left side were torn and he breathed with great difficulty.

The extent of his injuries may not be known for two days, but Coach Mennan was worried and right by so as Mennan's loss would rob him of one of the best ground gainers of 1931 football.

Mennan's injury spoiled one of the best drills of the season in the Wildcat camp last night. "Pug" Rentner, his star passer, returned after a few days on the injury list and his presence inspired and kept up the Wildcats to the same pitch that enabled them to give Notre Dame a tough, scoreless afternoon in the mud of Soldier field.

Ohio Drills on Defense
Forgetting the cheers that followed their upset of Michigan, Coach Sam Willaman and his Ohio State team were busy throwing up a defense for the Wildcats. Coach Willaman said he believed his team had sufficient scoring punch and that he would stress defense most of the week, especially a defense against the celebrated Wildcat passing attack.

Smarting under criticism for their showing against Ohio State last week, Michigan's Wolverines were in a dangerous mood for the Illinois game as they hustled through a spirited scrimmage against the freshmen. De De Baker starred in the drill, going across for three touchdowns in less than 10 minutes. Meanwhile, Coach Bob Zuppke, sensing a psychological opportunity, of getting revenge on Michigan, had his Illinois in a cheer leading frame of mind. The Illinois attack appeared greatly accelerated and "Zup" worked overtime, with cheers and orders to "stop - Newman." Bill Hedtke strengthened the line by returning to center duty.

Because of injuries suffered in the Wisconsin game, Coach Noble Kizer was busy making shifts in his Purdue lineup for the Carnegie Tech game. Several players were tried in the line while the plan was to shift Paul Fardmore to right half if Jack White can resume his quarterback duties.

Only One Scrimmage
Wisconsin, too, had bruises to mend so Coach Glen Thistlethwaite drilled his reserves for the Pennsylvania invasion. All the regulars were expected to start in the Penn game. However, but only one still scrimmage was scheduled for them this week.

Minnesota eased up on its training for the same fear of injuries while Iowa drilled on blocking, which Coach Burt Ingwersen said was the principal reason why the Hawks failed to score against Indiana last week.

There was considerable activity in the Chicago and Indiana camps solely for the reason that two coaches want that game Saturday. At Chicago, assistant coach Pat Page, who was dismissed as head coach at Indiana at the close of the 1930 campaign, told the varsity every day formation he had ever used at Indiana while his successor at Indiana, E. C. Hayes, drove the Hoosiers overtime in a scrimmage with the freshmen and then gave them written examinations on strategy.

Kaukauna — A large sedan owned and driven by Herman Wolfram, 1019 Winnebago-st., Appleton, was damaged about 10 o'clock Tuesday evening when the driver lost control of the machine as the left rear wheel struck the curb at the corner of Oak-st. and Main-ave. The car swerved across the street toward the municipal building, where it crashed into a small concrete abutment. No one was injured. The curb at this spot extends in a curve into the intersection. It will be eliminated when the corner is widened this week.

New York — (CPA)—Nanking and Canton governments met Tuesday for a "unification conference," with a possible declaration of war against Japan as one of the agenda. Tang Shao-Yi—Springfield and Hartford please note—was chairman of the conference. The Springfield grammar school and Hartford high school boy, president of the national government, is one of the most astute and powerful of Chinese statesmen and there is hope that he may fend off a war. "Japan could whip China in 36 hours," he said a few years ago. "War talk is foolishness. We must find some other way."

Tang went to Columbia from Hartford and, returning to China, took with him two favorite oriental pleasures from western culture—a love of poker and baseball. He drives about Shanghai in a magnificently carved dogcart with a huge bulldog. A former premier of the Chinese republic, he is the father of Mrs. Wellington Koo, wife of the former ambassador to Washington. The British failed him in the boxer rebellion, and he doesn't like them. He looks to America for the stabilization of the orient. When America returned the Boxer indemnity, he came to Washington loaded with priceless porcelain and jade for American officials.

While deeply versed in his own ancient culture, he is one of the most alert and progressive of the mandarins. He lives in a stately palace and wears a blue satin dress, with a short black jacket and green silk trousers. He slips tea from a Ming bowl and keeps a courier running out for the latest American baseball scores. He likes the Yanks. One might suggest that he propose that Japan and China settle their quarrel with a seven-game series.

"Can America plan?" ask the heavy-hitting economists, and here is the bald, Canadian-born Senator Felix Pebert of Rhode Island heading a senate committee to feel out the idea. While the committee is for unemployment insurance, Gerard Swope's ambitious plan, with Mr. Swope explaining it, is up for examination and Mr. Swope's new economic state charts the distance route in planning.

In 1929, when the senate was tumbling and exhausted in the tariff fight, a violin lay on a desk as an exhibit of something or other. Senator Hebert started playing it. The Curtis held hung in mid-air. The concert was a smash hit. The senators scarcely had noticed the quiet newcomer. Music is his passion. In his family orchestra at home, Mrs. Hebert and his eldest daughter Catherine are pianists; his daughter Marguerite plays the cello and the son and his sons, Adrian and Felix Edouard, Jr., are violinists. They give home concerts for the governor and other officials. The son of a French Canadian shoemaker, the senator played his way into politics with his violin.

Moses Herzog, east side furrier, had a boy named Jake who became the "Jackal of Wall Street," gathered many millions and occupied many jails. However, it was as George Graham Rice and not as Jake Herzog that he made his career with a new installment appearing today as Rice is brought from the Atlanta penitentiary for his trial on a charge of failure to pay income tax returns on $1,850,000 in 1925.

This writer knew Rice in Goldfield when he was conjuring up dream mines with Larry Sullivan, Portland crimp. He was a castles-tro even in those days, practicing the same alchemy which finally sent him to Atlanta. There was a touch of paranoia in the man, to be noted as he pulled a Napoleonic lock while dictating flamboyant "yunker" letters. Nike's boy Jake had the gift of gab and it seemed to this observer that he was hypnotized by his own flow of language—it might have started him on his

URGE FARMERS TO WAR AGAINST WEEDS

County Agent Suggests Ways to Rid Farms of Pests by Acting Now

There is still time to deal weeds a hard blow this fall. Quick grass roots lose their vitality when exposed to the winter's cold so working the fields now to bring the roots to the surface of the ground before freeze-up will go a long way towards ridding the fields of this weed, suggests County Agent Gus Sell.

Spring tooth harrows or quick grass diggers, used in plowing, have been found to give good results because they bring to the top of the ground large quantities of roots where they are exposed to the winter's freeze. This fall, the results obtained from this method should be very good because the fall rains have produced a heavy growth of tender roots which are more easily killed than are the dry, tough roots left at the end of a dry season.

Another method with which farmers have experienced good results is that of plowing shallow in the late fall, just to the depth of the quick grass roots. This, likewise, brings the roots to the surface of the ground for winter-killing.

Where Canada thistles are found, there is still time to give them a hard blow, also, by use of chemicals. George Briggs, of the Wisconsin college of agriculture, reports that as high as a ninety-five per cent kill has been obtained with one spraying in late October. The use of sodium chlorate or calcium chlorate on patches of thistle along fences or in the corners of the field where machinery cannot be operated to advantage, has been found a good plan by a few people who have tried it at this time of year, he finds.

However, when using chemicals, words which should always be kept in mind are "Be Careful!"

Too Much Food Swamps Stars In This Movie

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
(Copyright, 1931, by Cons. Press)
Hollywood — (CPA) — It may sound swell to say that 75 extras were paid today to spend eight hours in eating, dancing, and drinking tea. But try eight hours of it sometime.

They were making a Chinatown sequence in the picture called "Working Girls," at the Paramount lot. The principals as well as the extras discovered that a liking for food, or at any rate the courage to eat any kind of food, is an important side line of the celluloid art.

Paul Lukas, who has the leading role, had promised himself years ago that he would never eat any Chinese stuff. Especially not chop suey. The minute he arrived on the set this morning, Director Dorothy Arzner planked him down before a plate of chop suey and told him to eat it and like it. He had to register pleasure, too.

Paul Lukas consumed the plateful of chop suey, trying to look delighted. But something went wrong with the scene and darned if he didn't have to consume a second plate of chop suey and look even more delighted.

When he got through this time they decided to hand him an order of bird's nest soup for good measure. And then they topped off with shrimp's fins and other celestial delicacies.

It seems the camera has grown so hawk-eyed that it is difficult to deceive. When a scene shows players eating, the players have to eat.

FAVOR FAST READING FOR STUDENT PROGRAM

Ames, Ia. — (AP)—By learning to read more rapidly the average student may gain seven hours a week. So contends Dr. A. R. Lauer, associate professor of psychology at Iowa State college, following a study of 135 students.

The average student, he says, spends 20 to 25 hours a week reading material that could be read in 12 to 18 hours—an excess equivalent to 36 days yearly.

He recommends that students keep their minds on the subject, use phrases instead of words, then comprehend whole paragraphs, read silently, never take notes; relax occasionally and summarize.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists. 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. Adv.

LINER PASSENGERS AVOIDED EDISON, U. W. MAN RECALLS

Madison — (AP)—Passengers of an ocean liner once avoided the late Thomas A. Edison because the inventor talked so much about inventions. Prof. Ramnus B. Anderson, professor-emeritus of the University of Wisconsin and friend of Edison, disclosed here.

"I had not seen him for the last 48 years but I occasionally had a letter from him," Prof. Anderson said. "It was in 1873 that I went with Ole Bull, the great Norwegian violinist, to Norway and on the White Star line steamer 'Celtic' from New York to Liverpool Thomas Edison was one of our fellow passengers for 12 days. I was then 27 years old and Edison was 26."

"Many of the passengers on the 'Celtic' avoided him for he was constantly talking about the invention he had made and the inventions he was going to make."

Edison had just invented quadruplex telegraphy and was going to England to demonstrate the invention. In Ole Bull, once a resident of Madison occupying the home which is now the governor's mansion, Edison found a willing listener.

Prof. Anderson said it was at his suggestion that Edison recorded Swedish and Norwegian music in the early days of the phonograph.

FEED COWS SKIM MILK FOR INCREASING CREAM

Minneapolis, Minn. — (AP)—Like an errand boy, milk can be sent back to headquarters again and again for cream.

Experiments at the University of Minnesota show that where butter is the chief aim of dairying, skim milk can be fed to cows, milked and skimmed again and sent back for more cream.

The process of keeping milk circulating from cows to the separator and back is accomplished by mixing it with grain and pouring it over an absorbent silage.

LADY with a PAST

BY HARRIET HENRY

Chapter 1

REBELLION OF A DUD

LOOK too pure, Venice thought resentfully that's one trouble. Purity is out of style.

This dreary conclusion reached before her dressing table mirror was the culmination of the last ten minutes of dismal self-analysis. She had been lying on her chaise longue, hands clasped behind her head, eyes fixed mournfully on the ceiling. It was time to dress for the Goadbys' party. She felt no pleased anticipation at the coming festivity, merely a dull heavy-heartedness. She had no desire to go. She rarely, if ever, had the desire to go to anybody's party. Yes, perhaps three or four years ago, when she had been a debutante and was uncertain what to expect. Now she knew exactly what to expect. Nothing. It was always the same thing.

Gazing on the dove-gray stretch of plaster above her, she saw herself at one dance after another, this dinner or that, a cocktail party here or there. As far as she was concerned each was identical. Girls were nice to her either because they were really her friends or because they felt a vague pity. Young men were politely conversational in passing, but they seldom talked to her longer than courtesy demanded, and rarely, except when necessity decreed, had any one offered to take her home.

It all hurt most terribly. She wanted to be liked, longed most urgently to be the sort of girl that people noticed and asked to meet. But she could not make herself into that kind of person. She loved to analyze human beings, but she had no flair for seeking or making friends. When a chance encounter brought her face to face with some one who stirred an answering glow in her, making her want to know him better, his warmth was promptly snuffed out by the draught of her own diffidence, her inability to draw forth a response.

But why?

From out the morass of her miserable self-examination this question made her go to sit before her dressing table mirror. She scrutinized with all the cool impartiality of some one staring at a person he does not know. A thin heart-shaped face, very white of skin and fragile-looking. It might have been a model for Rossetti. Copper-colored hair, slightly wavy, parted in the center and drawn into a small, tight knot low on her neck; grey eyes, soft, trustful, grave, not quite happy eyes pencilled by short dark lashes that stood out separately as though waxed; a small, chaste mouth somehow pathetic in its immaturity and droop. An open, innocent sort of face, a face that spelled no guile, no allure, no mystery. Just a wistful girl, unsure of things and unable to pretend.

It was here that she realized and resented the purity of her look. I should have a lily in my hand and a fall of pearls in my hair. She smiled wryly at the absurdity of such a picture in a day of Einstein and Eckener and Rudy Vallee. Her sense of humor often came at such moments to pierce her most gloomy speculations. And my neck's too long and thin. She raised her head to exaggerate its slenderness. But I'm too thin all over for that matter. It's lucky I'm not very tall.

She sighed.

But it isn't really my looks. They're average. I'm not flippant enough, not gay enough. And no one's interested these days in the type of girl I really am. At least no one who gads about and enjoys what the papers all society. And mother won't let me out of the social groove.

Oh, God.

She went to throw herself on the chaise longue again. Bitterness as she called her. Her mind leaped to paint a picture of herself at the Goadbys' party. Trying so hard to be pleasant, watching herself fall flat. The consciousness of her own failure. If only she weren't so sensitive, didn't realize herself what a dud she was. Isn't that what they called those shells that were tossed forth and never exploded? A dud. It exactly described her. No. She wouldn't go. That was that. She had started to pull off a stocking when the door slowly opened.

"Are you wearing your new dress tonight, dear?"

"I'm not going, Mother."

"Of course you're going. What's the matter, Venice? Aren't you well?"

Mrs. Muir stood just inside the doorway, a large aristocratic woman, white haired, beautifully cosseted, beautifully groomed. Her face was clear-cut like a cameo, meaningless and charming. It had been so thoroughly schooled in the social graces that one felt its smiles were taken on and off regardless of the emotion behind them. It was something kept in a reticule to be hastily donned or discarded at other people's pleasure. She spoke with a slight trace of Southern softness. She was proud of having been a Lee from Virginia. Family tree was her gauge, money merely the fertilizer that made it flourish. She condescended to be a member of society in New York, but in spite of the condescension she earnestly longed to have her daughter, a younger leader in that glowing, superficial, indifferent sphere.

Venice sat with a sheer stocking in one hand and that look of misery in her eyes which annoyed her mother so frequently.

"No, I feel all right," she said. "But it's the same old thing. Why should I go? I never have a good time."

"It's your own fault. Why shouldn't you have a good time? You're unusual looking, you have pretty clothes and a pretty figure."

"I have no small talk, Mother. I'm not gay and carefree like most of the girls in circulation. I—I don't know what it is."

"I'm like a box," she thought, whose lid invariably sticks at inopportune moments. I never can open it quickly enough to show the entertaining things inside.

"You must cultivate small talk, vivacity."

"It's not natural to me, Mother."

"Then affect it. Come along, Venice. Put on those new broad-based slippers and the yellow dress."

There was a silent battle. Mrs. Muir won.

"My dress should be cut to the waist in back," she said. "It's not being cut quite low enough spoils all the smartness."

"Nonsense, my dear. Do you want to ape the musical comedy stage?"

"Why not? The stage gets its clothes from the best French dress-makers. Most of the girls we know have their necks cut daintily."

"They need sensational touches to commend them. You have your breeding."

Venice reflected that a young man at a dance did not pursue you for your family tree.

"You look lovely, dear," said Mrs. Muir. She never meant to be unkind. It was all for Venice's good.

Venice, discreetly followed by Nora, climbed forlornly into a taxi. The maid was to be left at the Goadbys' front door.

It was a big white stone house in the East Seventies. Lights glowed warmly from behind every shaded window and a line of cars stood along the curb outside. A butler admitted her to a wave of warm, scented air.

It was Jerry Ward, one of the young men who had always been courteous in passing.

"Hello, Venice."

"Hello," echoed Venice. Here's my chance, she thought, to say something amusing that will make him want to stay. "I—I—"

He was gone.

She took a tentative step nearer the ballroom. Couples foxtrotted by. One or two waved at her. Color crept into her face at the pained embarrassment of this standing about alone. Suddenly Lola Goadby came her. With the exception of Nolly Scauldin, Lola was Venice's only really intimate friend. She was blonde, snub-nosed, brown-eyed, eager, effervescent. She broke from her partner's dancing and, dragging him by the hand threaded her way to Venice.

"Hello, darling. You're late."

"I know. I almost didn't come."

"Same old reason, I suppose. Well, not at my party. Venice. This is Miss Muir, Mrs. Reese." Lola deliberately went away and left them to gether.

(Copyright, Harriet Henry)

Venice makes a determined effort to interest Reese, tomorrow. But what does she fear?

Of a total highway mileage of 2,030,000 in the United States, 799,000 miles are surfaced.

PRaise Laymen FOR GROWTH OF CHURCH IN U. S.

Rev. George Casey Also Lauds Activities of Knights of Columbus

The lay apostolate of the Catholic church has been responsible for the growth of the church in the United States, the Rev. George Casey, Stevens Point, told 200 knights of Columbus and their ladies at the Landing Day banquet at Conway hotel last night. The meeting was sponsored by the Nicolet and Father Fitzmaurice councils of the order.

Sir Knight Frank J. Sensenbrenner of Neenah acted as toastmaster. Chris Mullen, grand knight of the Appleton council, introduced the toastmaster, and George T. Prim Appleton, district deputy, introduced visiting guests.

Father Casey declared that he could compare the laymen of the Catholic church with Christopher Columbus because of their possession of the same sterling qualities as Columbus. He said these qualities of faith, determination and courage had enabled the Catholic church in the United States to reach the place it has and he said all of the credit is due to the laymen, not to the clergy. He also pointed out that if the church began to lag it would be because the laymen had lost faith and determination.

"All workers of the church cannot receive widespread acclamation for their accomplishments," Father Casey said. "But they should remember that the Almighty, like a football coach, is sitting on the sidelines, and he sees and appreciates the work of the laymen as well as the man who makes the touchdown and wins all the applause."

The Knights of Columbus were praised by Father Casey for the big party they have played in the growth of the church. He also praised the Appleton council for choosing the name of Father Fitzmaurice for its lodge. He pointed out that the fine qualities of the former pastor of St. Mary church should prove an inspiration for all present and future members of the Appleton lodge.

He urged laymen to take an active interest and part in the work of the church. Following the talk, solos were sung by Miss Florence Roate and Lester Ballet. The program was followed by dancing and cards. Prizes were won by the following: pivot bridge, Mrs. Hugh Garvey; progressive bridge, Mrs. Fred Stip; and Henry Marx; schafkopf, A. J. Seithemer.

CLARK ADDRESSES KOHLER BOY SCOUTS

"Our Responsibility to Youth" was the topic of an address delivered by M. G. Clark, valley scout executive, at a rally of Kohler boy scouts at the Kohler club building Tuesday evening. Ex-Governor Walter J. Kohler was a guest at the 6.30 banquet which preceded the program. A. F. Claude of the regional scout office in Chicago, Ill., was the other speaker.

CONFESSES GUILTY IN INTENT TO KILL CASE

Oshkosh — (P)—Municipal Judge Silas Spengler has taken under advisement until Saturday the case of Frank Schreiber, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with intent to murder. Schreiber fired three revolver shots at Max Wachtveldt, a fellow employe at the Oshkosh millworks here some time ago. One bullet was deflected by a tobacco can and the other two missed.

CONTINUE DRY LAW ACTIONS AGAINST TWO

Milwaukee — (P)—Dry law actions against Raymond Nowak and Felix Suksato, Kenosha, arrested in a raid on the Rainbow inn Monday night, have been continued to Oct. 30, when preliminary hearing will be held. The case against Fred Krueger, Racine, was dismissed by Commissioner Floyd Jenkins yesterday, but a co-defendant, John Rukkas was bound over to federal court.

Ready to Explore "Half World"

It's a motor boat journey into the "half world"—little known parts of the dense Amazon jungle—that lies ahead of these two youthful explorers. Desmond Holdridge, left, 24-year-old leader of the Brooklyn Museum's Brazil Expedition, and Emerson Smith, right, cameraman, are shown here in the cabin cruiser which will take them into the Amazon delta in quest of the funerary pottery of a vanished, unnamed civilization. They also will make a scientific study of the present Indian inhabitants of the region. They sailed from New York for Para by steamship.

Adding Machine Mightier Than Gang Machine Guns

Washington — (P)—The power in the government's adding machines has been impressed by recent events upon Al Capone and others in similar lines of business. Gangster financing and gangster strength have depended largely upon such spectacular agencies as the automatic gun.

By contrast, government agents went about their conviction in the prosaic fashion of accountants giving a bank its customary audit. They wanted to know how much money criminal leaders made and how they spent it.

This ability of internal revenue agents to trace the sources of bank accounts of taxpayers has troubled the widely-known criminals more than all the sidarms issued in recent years to government, state and city officers.

The conviction of Capone, symbol of organized crime, and of many others of his empire has depended largely upon the skill of men trained in bookkeeping and accountancy. "They tarred out gangster deals with all the persistence of a slow footed, keen nosed hound tracing the meanderings of a wandering coon. At the end of one trail was Capone. The "untouchables," young prohibition agents who inquired into Capone's liquor connections and could not be bought, experienced most of the drama of the investigation into his activities.

They risked their lives but in the end it was a financial mosaic, sparkling with such bits as $275 diamond belt buckles. They convinced a jury that the notorious Chicagoan has cheated his government out of its rightful due.

Jack "Legs" Diamond, New York city gang leader, extended his operations into the Catskill mountains and in consequence is under sentence for violating the dry laws.

An impressive roll call of gangsters and racketeers convicted of violating the income tax laws, shows Diamond's case, however, as the exception that proves the rule. The list includes Al, himself, his brother, Ralph; Jack Guzik, Capone gang treasurer; Frank Nitti, another of the Capone outfit; Sam Guzik, Jack's brother; Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, onetime Chicago beer barons.

MATHER FUNERAL HELD TODAY IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland — (P)—Simple funeral services were arranged today for Samuel Mather, steel magnate and philanthropist who died early Sunday.

The services, attended only by members of the family and representatives of organizations in which Mather was active, were in charge of Bishop Warren Lincoln Rogers of the Episcopal diocese of Ohio. The body will remain in a crypt at Trinity cathedral until S. Livingston Mather, son of the famous industrialist, returns from Europe. Then it will be buried in Lake View cemetery.

Messages of condolence were received last night from President Hoover and John D. Rockefeller.

INDIAN'S PLEA IN TRAPPING CASE IS BASED ON TREATY

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. — (P)—Justice Court here, in a curious case, is trying to determine whether an Indian treaty more than a century old, or the code of the legislature at Lansing is the law of the land.

Before the bar of justice is Dan Bird, Chippewa Indian, who made no secret of the fact that he had in his possession six muskrat skins at a time of year when killing muskrats is illegal according to the legislature.

But Dan called attention to treaties of 1819 and 1820 in which the Great White Father accorded to Chippewas the right to hunt what, where and when they pleased. Latest supreme court rulings apparently are on the side of white man's law.

CANNED BISCUITS ARE SHOWN AT EXPOSITION

Chicago — (P)—For the bride who fears she is paying the way to the divorce court with biscuits—canned biscuits!

They were exhibited at the National Food exposition today as a solution to her problem.

These biscuits—southern variety—come already mixed, rolled and cut. All that is needed, so the demonstrator said, is a can-opener, a hot oven and two minutes' time.

A one-mile railroad connecting Stanwood and East Stanwood, Wash., is still operating after 40 years.

Describes Edison's First Talking Picture Efforts

Hollywood, Calif. — (P)—A movie old-timer who worked for Thomas Edison in the days when the great inventor was striving to achieve a talking motion picture recalled today the making of those early auditions which were among the predecessors of the modern vocal screen.

Oscar Apfel, long a director but now a character actor at Paramount studios, was one of the men who assisted the inventor in a series of talking picture experiments in 1912.

Apfel was directing silent one-reel films for the Edison film company in New York when the inventor sent for him to come to his laboratories at West Orange, N. J. "He had just invented the camaphone," said Apfel, "and since I had been a stage director he wanted me to work with it."

"Edison took me from his office and pointed to a large tent in the open. That, he said, was my talking picture studio. I began my talking picture direction with a tableau version of the prison scene from 'Faust.' Ernest Torrence played Mephisto, and thus made his screen debut as a talking actor."

The method, in the light of today's, was crude, according to Apfel.

"It consisted of a camera which was connected with a wire pulley to a phonograph recording machine back of it. Even in those days we had synchronization in filming. A huge horn stretched from the recording machine over the heads of the players. We were limited to seven minutes for the talking picture since this was the capacity of the disc record. We had to rehearse carefully because a scene had to be perfectly timed and errors ruined the entire disc."

The camaphone had its first public demonstration Feb. 17, 1912, at the Colonial theatre in New York. It created no special enthusiasm, except as a curiosity and after being shown in several large cities was withdrawn.

DENMARK LEADER IN DAIRY COOPERATIVES

System Employed in That

Charles L. Hill

Shawano — (P)—Wisconsin could take some pointers from Denmark insofar as cooperative dairy organizations are concerned, Charles L. Hill, chairman of the state department of agriculture and markets, said in an address at the Farmers' Get-Together Conference here today.

Mr. Hill attended the International Dairy Congress at Copenhagen this year as one of the representatives of the federal government.

The first successful Danish cooperative creamery was started in 1882 in West Jutland two years before the first one was established at Luck, Wis. Denmark now has 1,425 as compared with 255 for Wisconsin but the difference is largely accounted ed for by the 2,000 cheese factories in Wisconsin, Mr. Hill said. Every cask of butter exported from Denmark is of a standard quality fixed by the government and is marked with the Eur brand trademark, Mr. Hill said, adding that such a plan of standardization would seem to be the first essential for a sound cooperative marketing plan."

The speaker said the Danish dairy farmer is studying his customers' taste and trying to produce the quality desired.

About 90 per cent of the milk produced in Denmark is handled by cooperative creameries, Mr. Hill said. Cooperation also marks the swine industry which ranks next to the dairy industry as a producer of agricultural income, he said.

EUGENIE HAT CRAZE BRINGS PROSPERITY TO EASTERN CITY

Danbury, Conn., Pays Its Debts, Buys New Goods as Result

BY DEXTER H. TEED
Danbury, Conn. — Well might the ghosts of Zadoc Benedict, the unknown hatter of 1864 and Ezra Mallory rise from their last resting places and salute the memory of a frivolous little empress of the last century who wore rakish hats with a feather a-flutter.

For here in Danbury, where 85 per cent of America's hats are made, the vogue of the Eugenie hats, first worn by the Princess Eugenie before she became Empress of France, has brought sudden prosperity that would make those three pioneer hatters cheer with fervor.

There is almost no unemployment. Old bills and taxes are paid, coal bins are full for the winter the people are happy and milady has suddenly shown a tendency to replace summer dresses of other seasons with the elaborateness that goes with plenty. Danbury is probably in the best condition economically of any industrial city in the country.

Prosperity!
Since the Eugenie style has "caught on" with millions of women, orders for hats—and more hats—have put the employable part of the 28,000 persons in the city back to work. Wage earners are making from $75 to $140 a week. Payrolls of the 14 factories approximate $300,000 a week and at the peak of the rush 144,000 hats were produced each day. Few workers from other sections are hired.

The people are enjoying prosperity as they did in the boom before the depression," says Mayor C. Walter Morgan. "Of course we can't tell how long it will last, but we hope it will last until February when orders for spring hats start coming in. The people have most of their old debts paid up, and now they are commencing to buy."

Morgan, in business himself, is well-qualified to comment for he has been in close touch with the situation during the past two years when money has been scarce and jobs scarcer.

Great While It Lasts
Factories have not been working 24 hours a day, but there have been two shifts in many of the plants, plenty of overtime work, and a general quickening of activity that has gratified all. "There is no unemployment among skilled workers," declares Frederick T. Joy, general manager and vice-president of the Mallory Hat Company, Inc. "Nothing like it has ever happened before. The women want Eugenie hats and we are supplying them as fast as we can. This has caused the boom, for the production of men's hats remains about the same."

Even Joy doesn't dare predict how long it will last. There are indications, however, that the Eugenie style's appeal is not waning to any appreciable extent. And if any moral is to be drawn from the situation, Joy believes it must be this: Something that the women wanted was created. The demand followed, and that demand is now being filled. Other industrial communities' best brains might work out plans for creating demand for their products, he thinks.

Money Wisely Used
At the F. H. Lee Hat Company optimism is not so evident. There the belief seems to be that "it won't last" and that it is only a seasonal increase in business. The other two largest companies, George H. McLaughlin Hat Company and Harry McLaughlin and Co., are working overtime filling orders and letting the future take care of itself.

The people, however, are looking ahead. Banks report a marked increase in savings accounts. Cool companies have information that not only are many coal bins filled for the winter, but the coal is paid for. Taxi companies are the only out-and-out pessimists. It is significant when they declare:

"Business? Our business is worse. Everybody in the cities has a car now and money enough to afford to drive it—so how do you expect us to get any business?"

The Ripples Spread
Although at first the city's merchants didn't notice any increase in business there is evidence now that people, with their bills all paid, are commencing to buy. When the depression came many retail-credit concerns were opened in Danbury. Accounts were encouraged—but that is changed now. The people pay cash.

City officials have been affected by the prosperity too. They appropriated funds to tear up the trolley tracks and re-pave the main street. Work is progressing fast, and the new pavement will be ready for the opening of the fair next month. This event promises to be something of a celebration of the return to prosperity.

No ceremonies dedicated to Eugenie have been planned yet, nor has the city prepared to honor the "unknown hatter" who headed one of eight families which founded Danbury in 1634. But he will be recalled along with Zadoc Benedict's little red hat shop of 1780 and the business that Ezra Mallory started in 1823. They are immortals in the hat industry in America.

Looking upon the present prosperity and remembering that the clean, pure water found in the neighborhood was one reason why residents will always owe a debt of gratitude to the springs which still furnish the right kind of water for washing felt.

But even all that is dim history at the present moment. The citizenry of Danbury is living in an economic Utopia now because of Eugenie's vogue. Although she has been dead three-quarters of a century she is the most talked-of person in the city today.

Many "Trunk Murders" On Record In Last 50 Years

Chicago — (AP)—Discovery of the bodies of two women in baggage trunks at a Los Angeles railroad station recalled to Chicago police veterans today many similar killings in the past 50 years.

Murderers often have sought to hide evidence of crimes by shipping the bodies of their victims to non-existent addresses in distant cities, the police said, but capture has resulted in many instances.

Ease with which shipments by rail or water can be traced to the sender was given as one reason for the captures. In other instances, ownership of the trunk or other container was traced, and the killer apprehended.

Perhaps the most widely recalled of all the so-called "trunk murder mysteries" was that of Elsie Sigel, a beautiful, young missionary worker in New York's Chinatown in 1909.

The trunk in which her body was found was traced to Leon Ling, a Chinese laundry owner. Race prejudice from the case, led to diplomatic exchanges between Washington and Peking. Miss Sigel had been engaged to marry Leon Ling and, police said, he killed her when she attempted to break the engagement.

That there was the case of Mrs. Katherine Jackson Leroy, a young wife, whose mutilated body was shipped from Detroit to a fake address in New York city. She had been tortured with surgical instruments, police said, and placed in the trunk to suffocate.

Suspects were arrested in practically every large city of the United States, and also in South America, England and France. No conviction ever was obtained in connection with her death, but her husband was

EDUCATORS' PLANS REQUEST FOR MORE RADIO BROADCASTS

New Congress May Hear Long Plea When It Assembles in December

Washington —(AP)—Education's drive for a larger share of radio facilities will be carried to the new congress which meets in December.

Educators plan to seek enactment of the bill introduced in the last congress by Senator Fess of Ohio which provides that 15 per cent of the "effective service" program broadcasting facilities be reserved for educational uses exclusively.

Under the Fess bill about 12 clear channels would be allotted to "educational agencies of the federal or state governments and to educational institutions chartered by the United States or by the respective states."

Several educators, including Dr. William J. Cooper, national commissioner of education, have deplored the decrease in the number of educational stations.

They say there is an increasing overemphasis of commercialism in broadcasting, with commercial stations asking more power while educational stations are cutting.

Meanwhile the big radio networks have announced plans to expand their educational broadcasts. CBS in enlarging its "University of the Air" programs and NBC is inaugurating a series of weekly programs featuring talks by educators.

CROOKS ACCLAIMED LEADING ARTIST; SINGS HERE OCT. 29

Young American Tenor Opens Community Artist Series for Year

The brilliant future predicted several years ago for Richard Crooks, young American tenor who will open the Community Artist series here on Thursday evening, Oct. 29, has already become a brilliant present. He is acclaimed an artist of the first rank in both America and Europe, and each season the demand for concerts by him increases steadily.

Crooks, who is of American birth and ancestry, made his first public appearance at the age of 10 as a church soloist. Even at this age his voice was extraordinary, and Sydney H. Bourne, choirmaster of the church, urged his parents to educate him for a musical career. Crooks sang at this church for five years, at the same time receiving lessons from Mr. Bourne.

At 14 he was engaged for All Angels' church in New York and remained there until his voice changed from boy soprano to tenor. Once changed, his voice developed rapidly and it was only a short time before he was able to sing any tenor composition.

Although he was under age at the outbreak of the war, Crooks enlisted in the 626th Aero squadron and served with distinction as a flyer. The hardships of this existence apparently aided the development of his voice, for when he returned to civilian

NEW LAW CHECKS WASTAGE OF GAS

San Francisco —(AP)—California's two-year-old gas conservation laws has corrected the wastage situation termed by Secretary Ray Lyman Wilbur "shocking to the national sense" to a point where consumption of natural gas may soon exceed production.

The conservation law, first of its kind in the nation and the voluntary co-operation of producers, cut the total production to 209,000,000 cubic feet for six months of this year from 288,000,000 for the same period in 1930. Railway commission figures disclose that production was cut 27.3 percent and wastage an even 61 per cent.

PERMITS TOTAL $13,400
Building permits issued last week by John N. Welland, building inspector, totalled $13,400. During the same period last year permits granted aggregated $11,975.

life, he was singing better than ever. Shortly after he was engaged as soloist at the famous Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, as the result of an audition at which 45 other well-known tenors sang.

Crooks remained at this church until his engagements in concert and recital became so numerous that he resigned his position in order to devote all his time to that work. Tickets for the Crooks concert are now on sale at Belling drugstore.
